Schiedermayer Hardware Store Cash Drawer Robbed of Big Sum This Morning
HOLD PROPRIETOR AT BAY
One Stranger Rifles Cash Register While Second Man Wields Revolver

Two strangers, one of whom held George Schiedermayer, Sr., at bay with a revolver, robbed the George Schiedermayer and Sons hardware store of $340 in cash about 6:20 Saturday morning and made their escape. Police have very meagre descriptions of the robbers on which to base their search.

Mr. Schiedermayer, who usually begins work early in the day, was on the job shortly after 6 o'clock when a man entered and inquired if a boiler that he had brought in a day or two previous had been repaired. Mr. Schiedermayer started toward the repair shop in the rear of the store, followed by the stranger, when the front door opened again. The proprietor turned around and looked into the muzzle of a revolver and heard a sharp order to throw up his hands. While he was being "covered" by the gun, a second stranger, who had entered through the front door, rifled the cash register of $340.

The robbers left the building quietly and Mr. Schiedermayer did not give chase. After a few minutes he went to his home on the second floor of the building and related his experience to Mrs. Schiedermayer and the police then were notified. In the meantime the robbers were under cover. The only description furnished the police was that one man was tall and the other was short.

"Police hold to the opinion that the robbery was committed by men familiar with Mr. Schiedermayer's habits. He always starts his day's work early in the morning and carries considerable money in the cash register for use during the day."

HUSBANDS SPENT NIGHT AT HOMES, WIVES TESTIFY

Alibis Are Sworn to in Attempt to Prove Lemberger and Johnson Guiltless

Madison—Two women under oath battled for their husbands here Friday.

Mrs. John A. Johnson, 63, wife of "Dogskin" Johnson, 47, at Wausau penitentiary as the confessed murderer of 12-year-old Annie Lemberger, and Mrs. Martin Lemberger, 48, each testified at the preliminary hearing of Martin Lemberger that their husbands spent the entire night of the murder, Sept. 5, 1911, at their respective homes, in bed with them.

Dogskin himself, attending the trial for three days under guard, will take the stand Saturday to detail again the story he told at the pardon hearing which implicated Lemberger; that his confession was obtained by intimidation and torture passed summarily.

Mrs. Mae Sorenson, whose testimony at the hearing resulted in the arrest of Lemberger, will also testify.

Lemberger will not know whether he must stand trial for the murder of his daughter until well into the new year. Argument of attorneys is expected to run well into Tuesday, the next day of Superior Judge A. C. Hoppman's court.

1922 Will Be Happy, Chicago Leaders Say

Country Has Turned the Corner, Peace Virtually Is Assured and Business Is Asserting Itself, Business Men Say.

Chicago—These prominent Chicagoans Saturday told why 1922 will be a happy year for the United States.

C. H. Gustafson, president of the United States Grain Growers, Inc., said: "Next year will see a new era of peace and happiness in business. This is because farmers are determined to cooperate and take a hand in their own business."

Julius Rosenwald president Sears Roebuck company:

"My new year will be happy because it promises a more peaceful and prosperous world."

David R. Forgan, banker:

"It appears as though the arms conference will bring many new blessings to the world in 1922."

Louis Swift, president Swift and company:

"The country has turned the corner. Now let us all work so that 1922 will see the fulfillment of our best hopes and desires."

NEW WAR RULES DEFEAT FRENCH SEA AMBITION

Submarines Are Made Useless in Offensive Warfare by Life-Saving Clause
FRENCH VANITY OFFENDED
Sensitiveness Gets Best of Good Judgment—Cannes Meeting May Bring Change

By David Lawrence
Copyright, 1921, by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—The British and American delegations are determined to circumvent the French position on the building of submarines by offering such a set of rules for submarines in time of war as to render them useless as a weapon of offensive power.

The French have protested so violently against the German methods of submarine warfare and their record on the subject is so recent that the Americans and British have now taken another tack in the conference and are endeavoring to see whether the French, who abhorred the submarine when the Germans used it, will now defend it as a humane and legitimate instrument of warfare.

The rules of warfare being drawn are such as to make it impossible for a submarine to attack a merchant ship for obviously the undersea craft cannot take care of the lives of either crew or passengers and one of the new rules provides that the merchant ship can't be sunk unless that is done. Of course the submarine would still be useful in naval battle against an invasion by a fleet but then destroyers usually accompany the larger ships anyway and destroyers mean sure death to a submarine.

ISSUE NOT SETTLED

For the moment the effort to make France agree to build a small tonnage of submarines has been abandoned but it is questionable whether the issue has been permanently disposed of. The French are playing Washington against Cannes, which is only another way of saying that when Prime Minister Lloyd George meets Premier Briand at the supreme council at Cannes, which will modify the French attitude at Washington. So far as the Washington government is concerned, it is plainly losing faith in and patience with the French. The talk is that the French have come.

BOOZE FACTORY IN HOUSEBOAT FOUND BY U. S. DRY SQUAD

Two Men Are Arrested After Discovery of Two Huge Stills in Operation

By United Press Leased Wire
Eagle Point, Wis.—A houseboat "distillery" plying its trade along the Mississippi river, was captured by prohibition officers near here Friday.

Federal Officer O. Kantecheff, assisted by Deputies Davis and Johns, made the capture which is considered one of the biggest moonshine hauls ever made in this section of the country.

Two large copper stills, 500 gallons of moonshine and other paraphernalia were taken. The boat which had become ice-locked, was moored to the Wisconsin bank when the officers stepped on board. It is 50 feet in length and was completely outfitted for both distillery business and living purposes. Firearms were found, but the two men on board submitted to arrest without resistance.

The men first were taken to Platteville where they gave their names as Alvin Patterson and Louis Smith of Dubuque, Iowa. The men are alleged to have said they sold the moonshine at $10 a quart which they were able to manufacture at $7 a quart. They also said they could make as high as seven gallons an hour.

The men were taken to Lancaster Saturday morning and lodged in jail. Officers claim the men are not new at business as they pretend, but that they are alleged to have visited this section on several occasions. The boat and moonshine manufacturing equipment was confiscated by the federal officials. The boat is said to be worth about $1,500.

MRS. "ATTELL" IS MAIL LOOT SUSPECT

By United Press Leased Wire
New York—A woman who gave the name of Ethel Burr and said by police to be the divorced wife of former featherweight champion Abe Attell was arrested here Saturday with two men for complicity in the $1,500,000 mail theft last July.

Mrs. Attell is charged with attempting to pass altered government bonds which were stolen and the two men—Sam Gold and Harry Cohen, salesmen—were charged with co-conspiracy.

The shipment of registered mail which was stolen was enroute from the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to the treasury department in Washington. The face value of bonds missing was $1,447,000. Some of the bonds were cancelled and others were marked "paid" with a rubber stamp.

By a clever use of chemicals the "paid" stamp was removed and many of them were passed.

Mrs. Attell told postal authorities who arrested her that she had divorced her husband in California in 1918. She claimed she bought bonds from a movie actor and thought the deal legal.

Attell was indicted in the world series scandal of 1919 but was never prosecuted.

WOODROW WILSON AT 65

These pictures of Woodrow Wilson were taken upon the sixty-fifth anniversary of his birth, Dec. 28. He posed for them in front of his home, 2340 S. Street, Washington. This is the first time he has appeared for his photograph, unattended, since he left the White House. He appears in better health than at any time since his breakdown.

50 RICH WOMEN ARE QUESTIONED ABOUT CHINESE KILLINGS

Two Operators of "Limousine" Opium Den Are Found Stabbed to Death

By United Press Leased Wire
New York—Fifty women, some of whom are wealthy, were being questioned by police Saturday in connection with the death of two Chinese in an opium den frequented by "the limousine trade."

The bodies of the Chinese, Tom Sat and Tom Shaw, were found in their three-room apartment. Each had been stabbed many times. An opium pipe lay on the floor and in one room there was a "hop kettle" with a flame burning under it.

Detectives also found a list of names of 50 American women. They are questioning them in belief that the death of the Chinese might have been paid for by a victim who feared blackmail.

Neighbors said that some of the patrons of the Chinese joint came in their own limousines.

A letter from a woman was found in the apartment. She is being sought.

The original of a portrait of a beautiful woman, hanging on the wall of the room where the bodies lay, is being hunted by police.

The letter said that the writer was "bringing the suitcase with her." It was dated Buffalo, Oct. 15, 1920.

Tom Sat's body was found lying on a slab—the couch on which China men sleep. Shaw was on the floor, his body lacerated with knife blades. The janitor of the building said Shaw had a white wife, but that he had not seen her about the place for six months.

PUSH PLANS TO RESTORE U. S. THRU FARMER

Invitations Are in Mails Summoning Agricultural Leaders to Washington

By United Press Leased Wire
Washington—The administration's effort to bring prosperity back to the farmer and to save thousands of farms from abandonment was under way Saturday.

At the direction of President Harding, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is sending out invitations for the agricultural conference which is to assemble in Washington on Jan. 23.

Administration officials are alarmed over the agricultural depression and are fearful that if existing conditions are permitted to continue, the production of foodstuffs will fall off to the point where a marked scarcity will result in shooting prices skyward once more.

The whole return to normalcy is involved in the agricultural situation and little real improvement is looked for in general economic conditions until the agricultural situation is relieved.

FOND DU LAC DOCTOR DIES AFTER ILLNESS

By United Press Leased Wire
Fond du Lac—Dr. L. P. Hinn, prominent local physician, died early Saturday after an illness of less than a week. He graduated from Helmsmann college, Chicago, in 1885 and prior to coming to Fond du Lac practiced medicine in Kohler and Theresa. He was a member of the county medical society and a long time trustee in St. Peter Lutheran church.

AUTO THIEF ESCAPES AFTER WILD PURSUIT

By United Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee—After a thrilling chase through the streets here late Friday night, an automobile thief made good his escape. Motorcycle patrolmen gave chase, but the man eluded them. The police believe the thief may be a member of the gang of automobile accessories thieves who have been working in this city for the past month.

Europe Plans Barter System To Avoid Ruin

CHINA WANTS SHOWDOWN ON JAP TACTICS

Asks to Place Shantung Solution to Open Session of Arms Conference
NAVAL TREATY IS READY
Word From France Is All That Prevents Decision on Major Ocean Agreements

By Frank W. Getty

Washington—Dissension again barred the arms conference Saturday as friction flared up between the Chinese and Japanese on the heels of subsiding Franco-British hostility.

With the arms conference in recess waiting now only for the cleaning up of odds and ends and the writing of a naval agreement, the Chinese delegates prepared to throw the entire Shantung question before the whole conference.

DISPLAY ANGER

Chinese delegates made no effort to hide their anger at the refusal of the Japanese to turn back the Shantung railway without strings. China has been patient, her delegates declared, but the time has come for a "showdown."

Japanese delegates insist that the Shantung matter is still in negotiation and that this is no time to place it before the open conference. The Chinese, however, charge that Japan is deliberately throwing obstacles in the way of a settlement.

Meanwhile the naval committee is taking a New Year's recess, waiting upon France to respond whether it accepts the Root resolution outlawing submarines as a weapon against merchantmen and whether Paris approves of the ten-thousand-ton limit on cruisers.

TREATY PROVISIONS

The forthcoming treaty to embody the agreements of the naval conference will provide:

Establishment of capital ship ratio as 5-5-3-3-1.75-1.75.

Establishment of a modified ten year naval holiday.

Recognition of existing international laws against unrestricted submarine warfare; probably also against use of U-boats, at all, against merchantmen.

Establish 155,000 tons as the largest tonnage for any nation in airplane carriers, grading from there down.

Battleships shall not be armed with more than 16-inch guns and cruisers with not more than 8-inch.

Limit individual cruiser tonnage to 10,000 tons (if as expected Paris O.K.'s that).

Make provision for a replacement chart and for scrapping ships and for other technical details.

The strain between Britain and France is modified. Delegate Sarraute's declaration that France has no hostile aims toward Britain and no desire to adopt German methods of U-boat warfare has eased the situation.

CHICAGO IS PORT OF BIG LAKE FLEET

Purchase of Rail Warehouses by Steamship Company Means Traffic Growth

Chicago—Chicago Saturday was defined to become one of the great ports of the world as the result of a deal consummated by the Great Lakes Transportation company.

With the purchase of two large warehouses owned by the Lehigh Valley railroad company, the transportation company announced it will make Chicago a port of original entry and delivery for a line of steamers plying between Buffalo and Chicago.

The Great Lakes Transportation company recently purchased the steamship line controlled by the railroad.

It was announced the transportation company will make just date arrangements with western and southwestern railroads operating in Chicago.

A rail-lake-and-rail tariff covering the traffic will be filed with the interstate commerce commission, officials announced.

NONPARTISANS TO OBLATE WITH APPEAL TO COURT

By United Press Leased Wire
Bismarck, N. D.—Two months after the recall election, the supreme court has decided an injunction to prevent it is too late.

R. A. Nestos has already become governor and a new agricultural and industrial commissioner are on the job.

The court decided that the position to enjoy the canvassing board from certifying the election of the trio "new is improper."

The decision recites that such action should have been taken prior to the election to have a standing in court.

Ministers To Help One-Eyed Cop In Cleanup

By United Press Leased Wire
Terre Haute, Ind.—One-eyed Jack Smox Saturday resolved "to tame" Terre Haute, one of the last wild towns in America, in 24 hours.

Smox starts as police chief at the dawn of the new year.

"And was soon when I start," said Smox. "I'll give the bootleggers, wild women and crooked gamblers one day to leave Terre Haute. They'd better only purchase one way tickets too."

Smox has a reputation in southern Indiana of being able to see more and shoot straighter than most two-eyed peace officers.

Smox is backed by a fund of $25,000 put up by the ministerial association to aid in sending Terre Haute through the law's laundry.

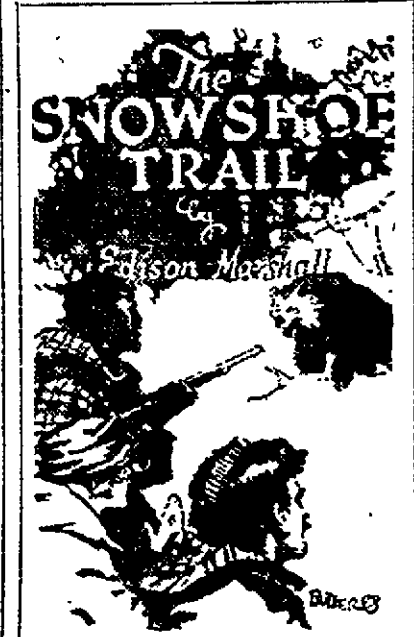

Ora Davis, new mayor, has agreed with Smox that the jangle of poker chips, the whizz of roulette wheels and the tin rap sound from cheap cabarets on New Year's day, o'clock on New Year's day, must cease one minute after 12.

SPECIAL MEETING OF COUNTY BOARD TO BORROW MONEY

County Funds Are Running Low and Money Is Required to Pay Bills

A special meeting of the county board of supervisors will be held in the courthouse at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 4, to authorize the borrowing of sufficient money to operate the county until taxes are collected. It is said that about $25,000 will be required.

The board, at its April session, adopted a resolution providing that if it is necessary to borrow money the board can be called into session without the usual formality of giving ten days' notice so that the matter can be taken care of at once. It was explained that tax collections by Feb. 1 will be sufficient to take care of all the short time loans which the board may authorize next Wednesday.

Consortium Including United States Will Build German and Russian Trade

IS UP TO ALLIED COUNCIL
Bankruptcy of Allies Will Be Avoided by Second Notable World Conference

By Webb Miller
By United Press Leased Wire
Paris—An international consortium to be organized by private interests and backed by all governments who desire to enter it, was suggested by a congress of European financiers here Saturday as the best method of economically reconstructing the world.

A definite agreement which tentatively draws up provisions for the establishment of a huge barter system to make possible the exchange of goods between producing countries and impoverished consuming nations thus rehabilitating central Europe.

POWERS APPROVE SCHEME

Representatives of the governments and big business organizations of England, France, Belgium, Italy and Japan, assembled in formal conference at the Quai D'Orsay agreed the new scheme should be capitalized at 20,000,000 pounds sterling.

The plan was put forward by the British delegation headed by Sir Robert Horne, chancellor of the exchequer.

All nations—including the United States, Germany and Russia particularly—are invited to enter in accordance with the plan in formal conference. The primary motive is to reestablish trade in Russia and Germany.

Details will be discussed at the allied supreme council meeting, and if the scheme is adopted a pan-European economic conference will be held later to elaborate on it.

WANT U. S. INCLUDED

After the meeting broke up at noon Saturday a British delegate declared that he was particularly desirous that the United States enter the plan if she desires.

"We have made no final decisions," he said. "We have merely accepted recommendations which will be brought up at the Cannes meeting of the supreme council."

The plan is founded on the general scheme of the Washington conference. After the Washington conference has been successful in limiting capital ships and arbitrating points of international discord, suggestions for a pan-European economic conference were made with such insistence by the London press that the government finally took up the plan.

A LONDON IDEA

Premier Briand then called to see Lloyd George in London and it is believed the basis of the present scheme was drawn at that time.

Reports have been current since organization of the economic scheme got under way that France might object to the inclusion of Russia in any international economic gathering. Appearing in the chamber of deputies several days ago, Premier Briand was asked if France intended to sanction the entrance of Russia.

Briand answered that France could not afford to stand in the way of the economic rehabilitation of another country and intimated the government would put forward no strenuous objections to Russia.

MILLWORK BODY IS ACCUSED BY STATE

By United Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee—Seventeen civil actions charging combination in restraint of trade and asking for judgment of $5,000 from each of ten members of the Milwaukee Millwork bureau in circuit court of Milwaukee county were filed here Saturday by the state of Wisconsin.

The action was taken by the office of Attorney General William J. Morgan after repeated complaints from contractors that the organization of wholesale dealers in interior lumber was violating the Wisconsin laws, according to J. L. Clifford, special assistant attorney general, who served the warrants.

Prices charged by the ten concerns named in the warrants, according to the statements of the contractors who complained, are entirely unreasonable and exorbitant.

HE JUST PEPPERED PLACE WITH BULLETS; BANDIT DIDN'T STAY

By United Press Leased Wire
Pittsburg, Pa.—Lind, represented by Frank L. A. China, laundryman, won a complete victory over matter, represented by a holdup man.

Lind was quietly ironing a collar in his establishment when the robber entered and showed a revolver in his face, demanding money.

"No money here," said Lind. "Plenty much in back room."

The robber smiled. He was still smiling when Lind opened fire from behind a curtain. The holdup man fled and Lind calmly resumed his ironing. A flock of cops arrived.

"Ten," Lind replied. "Holdup man here. He gone."

AUTOMOBILES TOOK SIX LIVES IN AND NEAR CITY IN 1921

Eight Fatal Accidents in Year Ending Today — Many Minor Accidents

Automobiles driven in and near Appleton during the 1921 season took as their toll the lives of six persons, according to a summary of accidents prepared by George T. Prim, chief of police. Two accidental deaths from other causes also were recorded.

Mrs. H. J. Hohlhoff, rural route No. 2, Appleton, was the first accidental victim. She was killed by a truck Apr. 11 at the corner of College-ave. and Appleton-st.

Another April victim was Stanton Leach, 3, killed Apr. 25 by a passing machine in front of his home at the Durkee and Pacific-st. corner.

June fatalities included the death of Martin Toopen, 7, struck by an automobile while crossing College-ave. at the Walnut-st. corner. Wil-

Association of Postmasters Considering Plan for Educating Public

Detail matters and essential rules and laws governing the mail service and the postoffice department which the public should know, will soon be taught in all public schools if the plans of the National Postmasters association go into effect, according to Postmaster Gustave Keller. He said that a committee has been appointed by the association to get in touch with postmasters in all sections of the country to obtain their opinions as to the best methods to follow in doing the new work.

All this came about through the suggestion of the federal postoffice department, which is cooperating with the postmasters' association. It was found to be the best policy to teach the school children all that the public should know so that the coming generation will become more closely connected with the depart-

CHIMNEY FIRE IS BLAMED FOR LOSS OF HOUSE

Henry Kower's Home on Sherwood-rd. is Destroyed by Night Blaze

Three hours after a chimney fire had supposedly been extinguished, fire was discovered Friday evening in the attic of Henry Kower's home, Sherwood-rd., about seven miles from Appleton, which resulted in the total destruction of the building, valued at about $5,000. A small chimney fire apparently was put out about 7:30 in the evening but at 10 o'clock, shortly after the family had retired, the odor of smoke filled the house and investigation revealed the attic in flames. Not even the clothing of the occupants was saved. After it was apparent the flames were beyond control, efforts were concentrated toward preventing the fire from spreading to other buildings. The house was covered by insurance to the amount of $3,000.

TARIFF WILL BE TRI-PARTY ISSUE

Three Political Groups Will Take Field in Canadian Election Campaign

Ottawa—For the first time in Canadian history three parties will contend for political power in the Dominion elections Dec. 6. The election will follow one of the hottest campaigns on record.

The three parties are: LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE, headed by Premier Arthur Meighen. This party was formed when the Liberal and Conservative parties decided to bury the hatchet during the war.

LIBERAL, headed by William Lyon Mackenzie King. It's composed of the Liberals who bolted the coalition after the war.

AGRARIAN, headed by T. A. Crerar. It's farmers' party of recent growth. It started in western Canada, but has spread over the whole Dominion.

TARIFF MAIN ISSUE. The tariff is the biggest issue. Whether a high or a low tariff be decided upon as the Dominion policy, will have a marked bearing on industries in the United States. A low tariff will mean that American products will pour across the border into Canada, thus stimulating industry in the states.

Liberal-Conservatives want a high tariff.

Liberals want a moderate tariff.

Agrians want sweeping reduction of tariff, free trade with England within five years and abolition of tariff on foodstuffs and machinery and materials used on farms.

The group now composing the Liberal-Conservatives had been in power since 1911. Sir Robert Borden, original leader, resigned in 1920 and his place was taken by Meighen, his lieutenant.

Each party leader is 47 years old.

Form New Orchestra. Appleton has a new musical organization known as the Lyric orchestra, organized and managed by Miss Dean Chamberlain. There are six players who will appear at various future public events. They are Miss Chalmers, piano; Arnold Welch, cornet; Miss Florence Kranhold, violin; Herbert Nye, mandolin; Harold Pardee, drum; Miss Pearl Zapp, banjo.

If you want to keep out of jail New Year's eve, keep sober.

This is the warning of George T. Prim, chief of police, who says the lid will not be lifted in Appleton while the jubilation during the old year's exit goes on, nor will it be lifted. The lid is down to stay and no leniency will be shown to people who imbibe too freely of drinks that possess a kick.

"Moonshine" Has Soft Snap While Government Red Tape Delays His Disposition

(Special to Post-Crescent)

New Bedford, Mass.—"Ho, hum, nothin' to do but eat and sleep and contemplate the follies of mankind."

Moonshine yielded to his tenth yawn and blinked his left eye.

Moonshine has had a 14 months' vacation at the expense of the United States government.

He's a horse and had the good fortune of having had for a master a bootlegger who was obliged to flee the prohibition authorities, leaving him and a wagon load of booze to the mercy of fate.

Moonshine and the wagon load of contraband liquor were seized by the authorities.

They disposed of the booze all right, but struck a snag when it came to disposing of Moonshine.

Red tape in Washington for the last 14 months has baffled all the efforts of the local agents to rid themselves of the horse.

Meanwhile, Moonshine has been living on the fat of the land at Ed Brawley's livery stable.

Moonshine's main bother is the societies for prevention of cruelty to animals.

"They keep comin' around here," says Moonshine, "askin' the boss if I have been exercised enough, advise him not to give me too much to eat and tellin' him how cruel it is to keep a horse in a stable all the time and not let him work."

"I wish they'd come around here and talk to me. I'd tell 'em a thing or two. I get all the exercise I'm lookin' for; my diet suits me to a T, and, above all, I'm not lookin' for work."

Moonshine has run up a board bill approaching the vicinity of $1,000 and continues to literally "eat his head off."

Harry Van Wyk returned Saturday to West Point where he will resume his studies at the army academy. He visited over the holidays with his father, Richard Van Wyk.

COUNTY MAY GET SLICE OF CEMENT TRUST'S PROFITS

District Attorney Heinemann Tells About Meeting in Madison

Returning from the state conference of district attorneys in Madison this week, Fred V. Heinemann, district attorney brings the news that Outagamie county's treasury may be enriched by a neat sum if the alleged combination of cement companies in Wisconsin is declared unlawful.

These companies are defendants in suits brought for the state by William J. Morgan, attorney general, alleging that the market is controlled through an association of large cement interests. Establishment of the guilt of these concerns will mean that each county which purchased cement during the term of the combination will be in a position to recover damages totaling three times the amount of difference in prices paid for the cement over the reasonable cost.

Outagamie-co. will be among those entitled to recover a substantial sum, Mr. Heinemann says, and promises that no time will be wasted in filing a damage suit if the decision is against the companies.

PRASE THIS COUNTY

The conference was called by Attorney General Morgan to instruct the district attorneys in legislative matters of importance, especially those dealing with laws enacted by the last legislature. Among those who addressed the meetings were several prohibition officers, Justice Burr W. Jones of the state supreme court and Mr. Morgan.

Mr. Heinemann learned from prohibition officers that Outagamie-co. is among the cleanest in the state so far as illicit liquor traffic is concerned. Enforcement has been carried out well here, he was told.

So successful was the gathering that a permanent association of all district attorneys in the state was formed. It will be known as the Wisconsin Association of District At-

Another Harriman Cow Sets New Milk Record

Holstein, 10 Years Old, Surprises Breeders by Her Production Mark

Eyes of the dairyming world again are turned on Appleton through announcement by H. M. Harriman, secretary of the Wisconsin Livestock association, that another cow of the association's noted herd has broken state test records and holds an enviable national position for milk production.

With Dr. Carlton J. Morgan and G. A. Schroeder of the dairy department of the University of Wisconsin conducting the tests, the champion commenced by giving 33.2 pounds of milk in one day, twenty days after calving. She wound up her test in 30 days, and 50 days from calving with a milk yield of 105.9 pounds of milk a day, or a total of 2,836 pounds of milk and 119.91 pounds of butter.

There were prospects of increasing this record when a contagious disease broke out at the farm and the cows were quarantined and the tests discontinued.

This outstanding record was made by the Holstein at the advanced age of ten years and eight months. This cow is a sister of Sadie Cornelia Cornucopia, and in her 7-day production of 710.2 pounds of milk has exceeded the record of the great Canada cow, May Echo Sylvia, Mr. Harriman says. The latter animal's son sold at public auction in June, 1918, for $106,000. The Appleton cow also excelled the showing of Spring Brook Bess Burke, II, at the same age. The son of the latter sold for $100,000.

BREAKS ALL RECORDS

Mr. Harriman says the record of his proud Holstein is the highest for milk or butter ever made among approximately 2,000,000 dairy cows in Wisconsin, and is the only one among 25,000,000 in the United States to average as much fat and give as much milk at her age on the first test, either for seven or thirty days.

Ancestry of the cow is responsible for her productive powers, Mr. Harriman says. She is the fifth of this remarkable family which he has bred and tested under the supervision of the University of Wisconsin. A little over a year ago Mr. Harriman announced a world champion in Sadie Gerben Hengerveld DeKol, following a 7-day test in which she had the highest milk and butter average combined of any Holstein cow known.

Readers may gain some idea of the productive ability of these cows when Mr. Harriman says the five cows of this prolific family produced 500 pounds of milk in one day. This is enough to supply 250 families with one quart of milk a day, meaning at present prices an income of $25 a day. Any farmer can do the same in an economical way, he says, by using better silage.

WOMANS CLUB TO PRESENT MUSICAL PLAY NEXT YEAR

"Fads and Fancies" is to be Staged With Local Talent in February

"Fads and Fancies," an amateur musical comedy will be given at Appleton theatre on Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 27 and 28 under the auspices of Appleton Women's club. Committees to take charge of the management of the play and to pick the leading characters and the many choruses will be appointed shortly after the first of the year.

The play, which includes many songs and dancing numbers is to be put on under the direction of the Marjott-Craghill Producing company. It was highly recommended to the local club by other clubs all over the country which have produced it. It is reported to be high class musical entertainment with the added interest of local artists whom every one knows and of many local hits at prominent people. The only professional actor in the cast will be Mr. Marjott who appears in one number with a local dancing partner, Mr. Marjott has studied with Ruth St. Dennis.

Since the signing of the contract here, Oshkosh has been booked for the same performance for Jan. 17 and 18. Green Bay will put on the play early in February. Rehearsals for the play here will be held two weeks prior to presentation in Appleton.

Tennis Court Once Was Used By County Fair

Very few members of the Y. M. C. A. who make daily use of the tennis courts of the athletic field immediately west of the building during the summer season are aware the field was once used as the grounds of the Outagamie-co. Fair association.

In recalling the early history of Appleton, Joseph Koffend, Sr., who came here as a boy in 1856, said it was used as the fair grounds for several seasons in the early '60s, and that at that time the park which contained a large number of trees run from Lawrence-st. through to College-ave., there being no buildings on College-ave. west of the old American house which was torn down to make room for Bretschneider building.

In the early days the fair association confined its exhibits to fruit, vegetables and other farm products and attracted settlers from all over the county. Later years the association held its fairs at the courthouse grounds.

CONTINUE TAX ON THEATRE TICKETS

New Law Repeals Tax Only on Tickets Costing Less Than Ten Cents

There appears to be a misunderstanding on the part of many Appleton people in regard to the new federal law which like the old, provides for an admission tax of 1 cent on each 10 cents or fraction thereof. The changes in the new law eliminates the tax on free admissions and also provides that no tax shall be applied on admissions to any place the amount paid for which is 10 cents or less.

The changes also exempt organizations, any post of the American Legion or woman's auxiliary thereof, any city, town, village or other municipality maintaining a cooperative or community motion picture theatre, and also exempts exhibits, entertainments or any pay features conducted by agricultural associations. If the proceeds are used exclusively for the improvement, maintenance and operation of the fair.

WHAT RESOLUTIONS, IF ANY, WILL YOU MAKE?

Never look backward through the hours, or days, or years of life, unless you are reasonably sure that by doing so your vision into the future will be farther or clearer. No matter what your merits may have been in that gone past, you would if you are fair with yourself, unravel from the tangled twining of thoughts, purposes and deeds more to regret than to prize. If you inventoried your performances and omissions of five, ten, twenty or more years, you would be less self-connected and more charitable with others.

Never look forward, on the other hand, without glancing backward. You were born with certain moral and intellectual capacities, and these qualifications for honorable success were modified by your experience and your environment through the passing years. As you have lived is the sum of your present resourcefulness, and what it is possible for you to do is forecast, to a great extent, by the spirit and philosophy with which your past has imbued you.

What it is possible for you to do is not the same as what it is probable that you would do. If you never review your achievements and failures, your habits, your proficiencies and deficiencies, your likes and dislikes, your inclinations, your mistakes and your perception, you plan, and think, and act in the rut of probability. Without appraising yourself justly, you cannot realize what is possible for you to accomplish.

Persons whose designs are solely in the present or future, with no idea of the relationship of the past to their arrangements, are not the deep thinkers of great soul and far vision whose works or successes survive to good and useful ends. Their incentive, rising outside themselves, is a souring bubble, bright, but hollow and evanescent.

The imaginary portal through which the passing year disappears and the coming enters in the same moment of fleeting time of scarcely more actual significance than the shift from night to dawn or winter to summer. But there is tangible significance to the serious sentiment of the reckoning of the past and the calculation of the future. The feeling, whether it is a depressing or hopeful emotion, is nothing of itself, but it will, if you induce yourself to understand it, sway you to wiser and nobler effort in the new year.

Do not be sad because another year has departed into timeless oblivion. It was not the year that counted, but whether you resolved high and whether you fulfilled the best of these resolutions. As the new year is here, look backward for a little while, study yourself and ascertain what resolutions would improve you. Then deliberately and confidentially pledge yourself to these few determinations, and be glad that you are the granter of another year in which to try harder and do better. Live up to your greatest possibilities.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

There would be no deficiency appropriations if there were no deficiencies, and there would be no deficiencies if government officers did not spend money in excess of appropriations, a thing which has been illegal since February 27, 1906, when an act was passed which provides that an officer so offending shall be fined in an amount not less than $100 and imprisoned for not less than a month. "This act," said Mr. Dawes, in a statement last week, "has been disregarded in the past, with the result that deficiencies of from $500,000,000 to $600,000,000 have been created yearly." Under such a system there can be no hope of economy since what the government spends is not determined by estimates and appropriations, but the whim of executive officers, who go ahead on the theory that congress will be under obligation to pay the bills that they have run up. Thus congress is committed to expenditures that it never authorized, and may even have affirmatively refused to authorize.

Mr. Dawes said that the President intends that expenditures shall be kept within the estimates presented by the budget, and apparently it is proposed to see that the act of 1906 is enforced. The budget will amount to little or nothing if deficiencies continue to be created in the old way. Budget estimates can not, any more than other countries enforce themselves. Unless they are considered binding, and are observed—or enforced if need be—there will be little economy as the result of the new system.

The practice always was evil. It is in conflict with the constitutional restriction which provides that "no money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law." Once again it is made clear that comparatively few changes would be needed were existing laws enforced, and also that unless the laws are enforced the changes will help little. This matter, and the whole subject of government economies will be considered by a conference, called by the President to meet next month, of the heads of the business organizations of the government. The President will preside, and make known what he expects to be done.

GREAT PROSPERITY IN NINETEEN TWENTY-TWO

Economic conditions in the United States are progressing so satisfactorily along fundamental lines as to leave no doubt that commerce will revive under practically normal circumstances early in 1922, approximately in March. Present signs which have every semblance of being adverse really are the final indications that the adjustment is approaching its termination. The basic necessities were contraction of credit and liquidation of costs and prices, and the paroxysms evident at this moment are symptomatic of the conclusion of the financial and commercial reaction.

The most imperative of the uncompleted settlements is downward cost rearrangement in the construction industry from the mills to the finished building or structure. It is notable that prices and costs are declining steadily in the manufacturing division of this industry and some headway has been made toward lowering costs among the building trades.

It is most important that cost and price liquidation should be effectuated in the construction industry, as this is the basic factor in finally determining the purchasing power of the nation. One of the common misimpressions is that it is the buying power of the people that creates and stimulates prosperity. As a matter of fact, the buying power of the people is not a cause, but a result of employment. The large buying power, which increases and invigorates commerce as a whole, is manifested in the purchase of building and structural, material, machinery, equipment, supplies and tools. This is the buying power which affords work for mechanics and laborers, and consequently creates the demand for farm products, wearing apparel and things which the people need. Presently assertive inclinations justify the expectation that the construction industry will be on a liquidation basis by spring. Nineteen-twenty-two will be a year of prosperity. The severe strain of January and February will denote the dreary end of the economic reaction, and it will not be the worst sign but the best, as it will force readjustments which have been retarded. Business concerns of all kinds have wiped out their obligations and reorganized their affairs. Stocks are low. Money is plentiful, and it will seek channels of investment as soon as the final economic accommodations are attractive. Fundamental conditions warrant the firmest confidence that next year will be a prosperous one.

There is one great issue that American business and the American public must hereafter take into account. That is that the maximum productivity of American commerce exceeds the American demand. Financial rehabilitation of Europe is essential to the attainment of the greatest opportunities for record American prosperity, and so are satisfactory international trade agreements, such as the reciprocal tariffs. The new boundaries of American commercial territory are the ends of the earth.

For the year just ending the railroads are claiming the lowest number of fatalities ever. Perhaps it was because fewer people were willing to risk dying at the rate of four cents a mile.—NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN.

Health Talks

BABY MARKS

Mrs. Z. S. lifts us from the slough of despond today:
"I have been reading your talks for a long time and I like you didn't believe in baby marks. I am the mother of two children, the oldest a girl and the youngest a boy of two months. He has a spot on his head the color of chocolate and the size of a lima bean. This spot was there when he was born. People say it is a mark. Won't you please tell me what it is."

And I suppose the women will not adjourn until they shall have arrived at a likely explanation for the phenomenon. This explanation, in order to be plausible, must take into consideration the freedom of the older child from that which has belated the younger. A pretty serious predicament, but let us not lose faith—they will be there with the proper skin right. If the little nevus or stain had had just a wee suspicion of mouse color, or maybe, the vague shape of the head of a snake or the outline of a hop toad?—Intriguing plots may be built on the flimsiest notions. Be of good cheer and give the gossips time.

No one knows the cause of these nevi or birth marks. The remarkable fact is that a few of us are born entirely free of blemish. One rarely finds a flower, plant or tree which is absolutely perfect.

Occasionally a small port wine mark spontaneously disappears, but most of these birth marks of all sizes and varieties are permanent, and should be treated in early infancy in order to obtain the most satisfactory cosmetic result. The method of treatment which would be most satisfactory depends on the character of the nevus and is a problem to be left to the judgment of the physician. Surgical excision, electrolysis, tattooing with an escharotic, injection of hot water, freezing with carbon dioxide, snow, X-ray and radium treatment have all been used with good results in different types of birth marks. The younger the infant or child, the better the result of any treatment. Under no circumstances is a parent justified in subjecting a child to any experimental treatment at the hands of any other than a competent physician. If the treatment is within the family doctor's field, he will refer the case to a competent specialist.

I hope it is clear to every reader that the term birth mark as I have used it in this talk is intended in its literal sense only, and not in the superstitious way people mean when they speak of "markings" an unborn child. Whoever takes that latter notion seriously in these days of enlightenment, is to be pitied.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Stenog's Gum!

Yesterday I began to chew a piece of gum and forgot and swallowed it as a piece of candy. Knowing it is such sticky stuff, I feared it might do harm. Would you advise taking salts or other quick acting physic to get rid of it?—(M. L. L.)

Answer—The first aid, when any foreign body is swallowed, is avoid physics. You need have no anxiety. The gum is harmless.

The Housekeeper's Hands

Will you please tell me something I can use to soften water, that is not so injurious to my hands as sal soda is? Can you suggest a hand lotion? My hands get very red and dry and irritated.—(Mrs. Z. G.)

Answer—I know of nothing better than sal soda for softening water. Perhaps you use too much of it in the water. This lotion is excellent for regular use to keep the hands soft and white: Trageanth shavings, 80 grains. Glycerin, 6 teaspoonfuls. Boric acid powder, 5 ounce.

Oil of rosemary, 1 ounce.
Ruin water or distilled water, 1 pint.

Slowly boil all except the rosemary, stirring frequently, until the tragacanth is entirely dissolved. Water must be added from time to time to make up for evaporation, and prolonged boiling is necessary. When cool add the rosemary and enough water to fill a pint bottle. Rub half a teaspoonful into the hands two or three times a day, after washing the hands and before they are quite dry. This lotion correctly made should be a clear jelly thin enough to pour.

Yeast Yields Uric Acid

In one of your articles you said that yeast is a good food, full of nitrogenous substance from which uric acid is derived. As I have always heard that uric acid is the cause of rheumatism.... (J. E. D.)

Answer—Uric acid has no bearing on the cause of any of the various joint and other diseases which are mislabeled as "rheumatism." There is little evidence to support the theory that uric acid is a cause of gout. Uric acid is a normal by-product in a healthy metabolism, normally present in the blood. It is questionable whether human life and health could be maintained without foods which yield uric acid.

Father Falls Down, Too

I would be glad to have you send me your literature on sex hygiene. It seems to me that, being 20 years old, my father should be telling me, but he avoids the subject.—(A. K.)

Answer—Fathers are almost as incompetent to teach their sons the first principles of manhood as mothers are to teach their daughters about womanhood. We'll all pass the buck and say it is because our fathers and mothers sort of fell down on this matter when we were youngsters. However, that doesn't pardon us parents. Ignorance of the law excuses no offender. In the letter I am sending you there is a list of pamphlets and books which may help your father in a very difficult, yet an unavoidable duty.

Chemicals In Warfare

By Frederic J. Haskin

Washington, D. C.—The next war, if it comes, will in all likelihood be fought to a large extent with chemicals. The amazing development of this form of warfare in the late world struggle coupled with the fact that chemical warfare is more humane than conflict with bullets and high explosives.

The blame for every conceivable sort of illness has been laid at the door of war gases, including diseases of the central nervous system, heart and blood vessels, the respiratory tract and the digestive system. This was because chemical warfare on a large scale was new, and little was known of the after effects. But a careful study of the subject has been made by the War Department during the past eight months, during which time some 3,500 letters were sent out to leading medical people throughout the world to obtain their views. Also, 1,200 claims for War Risk benefits were examined.

The result of this thorough investigation led to the inescapable conclusion that gas, on the whole, causes no permanent disabilities. It was found by investigation not only here, but in Germany, England, France and Switzerland, that there is no direct evidence that tuberculosis is an after effect of gas attacks.

In addition to this phase of the investigation, letters were sent to manufacturers of chlorine, heavy chemicals, and other materials that produce gases similar to those used in war. The answer to these letters in every case was that they had never observed permanent disabilities resulting from exposure to these gases, and that as a matter of fact, during the many years these chemicals had been manufactured, the question had never come up before.

Figures for the Army and Navy, excluding the Marine Corps, show that in the World War 238,336 men were injured. Of this number, 24,249 died on the field of battle. There were 12,691 who died in hospitals. Of this number, 70,552 were suffering from gas alone and only 1,221 died. Brigadier General Amos A. Fries, Chief of the Chemical Warfare Service of the United States Army, estimates that less than 200 men actually died on the field of battle as a result of gas attacks, since concentration of gas sufficient to kill within 12 hours was seldom obtained. Assuming that 200 died on the battlefield from chemical attacks, General Fries pointed out the total deaths from gas would be 1,441, less than 2 per cent of the 70,752 gas cases.

Of the 187,586 injured by bullets and high explosives, 46,449 died or more than 24 per cent. It is evident from these figures that the man injured by gas alone had more than 12 times as good a chance of recovery as the man injured by high explosive shells or bullets.

Other comparisons are quite as striking. The official records show that 66 men were totally blinded in the war, 44 were partially blinded in both eyes, and 644 were blinded in one eye. These include eyes destroyed or those in which the sight was lost. Of the gassed patients, 1 were blinded in both eyes, and 25 in one eye, a total of 26. These 26 were 3.35 per cent of all those suffering blindness in one or both eyes. In other words, bullets and high explosives were responsible for 25 times as many blinded as was chemical warfare.

Chemical Warfare A Peace Insurance
"In defending chemical warfare," says General Fries, "we are not pleading for war; we are pleading for peace. To the practical man the only way peace can be brought about in the world—no mean permanent peace—is to make war so powerful and so quick and so certain against the armed forces of the enemy that war will become intolerable."

"No Chemical Warfare officer was ever defeated frightfulness in war," the General continued. "The whole service is strongly against the use of gas as well as bombs or artillery shells against cities or other groups of unarmed men, women and children. They believe, however, that there should be no limitation on the use of these weapons against the armed forces of an enemy, whether on land or sea. Each side knowing that gas is to be used, will provide itself with masks and gas-proof clothing and will suffer less deaths and permanent disabilities by far than if the same number of men were injured by other methods. Modern war has aimed at putting men out of action as far as possible without killing or permanently injuring them. The records of the war show conclusively that gas is beyond question the best war material ever invented for that purpose."

Chemical Plants Admit Of Industrial Use
Many of the war gases have great peace-time uses. Most of those which have not such uses are made by the same classes of machinery, and by the same methods, as our medicines, our perfumes, our photographic chemicals, our dyes and even our photography.

In some instances there is needed only a slight change in process to make a valuable chemical compound into a powerful gas. An example of this is the change in the manufacture of indigo to mustard gas.

It follows therefore, that preparation for chemical warfare is highly economical, requiring no large outlay of funds during peace-times. During the war, chemicals cost about $150,000,000, while for other war materials handled by the Ordnance Department about $6,000,000,000 was spent. Yet it is known now that at the conclusion of the struggle, the Germans dreaded chemical attacks and attacks from the air more than anything else.

It is evident, according to General Fries, that a nation with a large development of commercial airplanes, and a thoroughly developed chemical industry, could wage a tremendous powerful war without a single cannon or machine gun. According to the General, gases will put out of commission from three to ten times as many enemy soldiers as bullets and high explosives, but the deaths would only be about one-tenth as great as from old-style fighting.

"If an army unprepared with gas should meet an enemy thoroughly prepared to use gas, utter disaster could befall the nation unprepared," General Fries said. "The unprepared army could not face the prepared army for a day, and with airplanes pursuing, could not escape. There would be only one thing—annihilation or surrender."

THE QUESTION BOX

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Appleton Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The Bureau cannot give advice on legal, medicinal, and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles, nor to undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Write your question plainly and briefly. Give full name and address and enclose two cents in stamps for return postage. All replies are sent direct to the inquirer.)

Q. On what book or work was Anatole France win the 1921 Nobel prize? C. N.

A. The publication which gained Anatole France the Nobel prize in 1921 is entitled—"La Vie en Fleur."

Q. How many patents are issued by the Patent Office in a year. How many of them are put to practical use? A. W. S.

A. The Patent Office says that the number of patents issued annually in the United States is variable as some years a great many more are granted than in other years. In 1909 26,493 were granted; 1910, 25,539; in 1920, 28,528. We find no statistics to show what percentage of inventions patented are put to a practical use.

Q. What language is spoken in Panama? R. S.

A. Spanish is the official language of Panama, but English is almost universally spoken in the Canal Zone, is the predominant language of Colon, and is understood and spoken by most of the business people of Panama.

Q. What county in the United States has the smallest population? C. P. G.

A. The Census Bureau says that Crane County, Texas, with a population of 27, has the smallest population of any county in the United States.

Q. Why was the inscription placed over Jesus' head when on the cross? C. W.

A. It was a Roman custom to place over the heads of the crucified their names and the crimes for which they suffered. The Scriptures give the inscription over the head of Christ, but not over the thieves. According to the Bible the inscription was written in Greek, Latin, and Hebrew.

Q. In what foods is calcium found and what is its function? F. R.

A. Calcium is found in the following foods: cauliflower, celery, butter-milk, spinach, cheese, milk, cabbage, string beans, carrots, blackberries, strawberries, onions, figs, tomatoes, lemon juice, dried beans, peas, beets, green peas, corn, prunes, raisins, potatoes, whole wheat bread, white bread, lean beef and cornmeal. Calcium helps to build bones and teeth.

Q. How much will the Great Lakes St. Lawrence Tidewater project cost, and when will it be done? J. L. F.

A. It is estimated that the project would cost not far from $250,000,000 and at present no time has been estimated for its completion.

Q. Is milk as heavy as water? H. H. P.

A. Milk is slightly heavier than water, its specific gravity ranging from 1.025 to 1.031 at 60 degrees F.

Q. How many grades of paper are manufactured? J. L.

A. The different grades of paper are: newspaper, book, wrapping, board, fine papers, felts and building, tissue, hanging and miscellaneous.

Q. What is meant by the burden of a song? K. G. V.

A. "Burden" is the drone of a harp. The burden of a song is the running accompaniment or repetition of musical sounds or words.

Q. Why is it that "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" apparently ends in the middle of a chapter? A. C. B.

A. Charles Dickens was working on "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" on the evening before his sudden stroke, June 8, 1870. This accounts for its being unfinished.

Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinion

The French Naval Demands

The French demand for a naval strength far in excess of that granted under the Hughes plan raised a storm in conference circles and in the press that grew to a tornado before it was checked. Modification that amounted substantially to withdrawal so far as capital ships were concerned served to quiet the tempest, but in American opinion it worked havoc while it lasted, and left an aftermath of submarine controversy. Representatives of France at the armament conference brought forth a program which if carried out would have given France one of the most powerful navies in the world and made it appear, the PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER (Ind.) says, that she "had thrown herself straight across the road that led to the goal of the conference, when the conference was in the very shadow of that great goal," although the ROANOKE WORLD NEWS (Dem.) believes that "the French evidently had no conception of what a huge hornets' nest they were stirring up," and "as soon as it became evident that their demands had angered the conference greatly, they immediately softened their attitude."

But the suspicion that France is playing the role of "obstructionist" persists in spite of the "softened attitude." The "ten-ship proposal was a bombshell," the BUFFALO TIMES (Dem.) asserts, "and the effect of the explosion is not over."

A good that is unexplained still looms in the background. "Conceding that the public mind is not exactly what France wants and what she proposes to do," the PHILADELPHIA NORTH AMERICAN (Prog.) explains, "the schedule of reductions proposed was calculated fundamentally upon the present strength of the American, British and Japanese navies which had been greatly increased by the war, whereas in the case of France war conditions have prevented naval developments, leaving her actually weaker on the sea than she was seven years ago."

An "in accepting the original naval ratio," even "in the face of a stronger fear," the FLORIDA METROPOLITAN (Ind.) feels that "the French has disappointed her enemies and won added admiration in the estimation of her friends."

Stinnes' Program as Scheme
Paris—Creation of a consortium for the economic reconstruction of Russia, to be composed of Great Britain, France, Germany and the United States, is provided for in the plan evolved by Hugo Stinnes, Germany's industrial dictator, according to a LONDON OBSERVER correspondent. These three powers would furnish Germany for this purpose with all the money, transport and raw materials necessary, and would ensure her a monopoly for the manufacture and supply to Russia of finished articles.

"Russian industries would be restricted to the production of raw materials and foodstuffs necessary for the payment of German deliveries, textile and metallurgical industries being prohibited in Russia in order to safeguard this German monopoly."

"The profits from the German undertakings in Russia would be shared between the powers forming the consortium in such a way as to ensure the payment of war reparations."

"In the meantime Germany would be granted a moratorium in order that the above plan should be put into execution as a trial."

But the proposal as the NEW YORK TRIBUNE (Rep.) translates it is "more of a political gesture than an expression of military policy," having to do, many editors think, with the old question of guarantees. "France wanted Great Britain and the United States to join in a pact to protect her against unprovoked out- side aggression to facilitate disarmament and stabilize the peace of Europe," the OMAHA WORLD HERALD (Ind.) recalls. The plan failed, but the paper continues:

"Now both countries have joined with France in entering into a somewhat similar agreement with Japan in order to insure against Pacific problems culminating in another outbreak of world war. France may be asking: 'If Japan, why not France?'"

Does The Modern Young Man Measure Up To Your Standard Of A Husband?

Here is a Chance to Express Your Views Concerning Desirability of Growing Generation as Mates for Life.

Is the alarming number of women in business at the ages of 30 and 35 due to the fact that none of them have ever had a chance to marry? Or is it because the modern young man fails to measure up to the definite standard which these young women have set for the fathers of their children? Those of the old school are shocked to hear modern young women talk glibly of the fathers of their children, but education and knowledge of social conditions has made it impossible to bury their ideas of their duty toward the next generation.

The story of a college graduate who is now a successful business woman, a responsible executive, tells the story of one woman who has not married because of the standard which she set in her college days. She told her story to college friends while she held the baby of one of her girl friends who had married.

UNFAIR TO CHILDREN
"You girls remember when I was in college and fell so madly in love during my junior year? We were engaged before I knew what was happening and for months I was the happiest girl on the campus—when I wasn't troubled by the thought that I would be unfair to my children in marrying George."

"You were all surprised when we broke our engagement after we left college and just a little disappointed in me. George was one of the most popular men on the campus, true he smoked a good deal, drank a bit too much at times, but his personality was wonderful, and certainly he was an ideal sweetheart. I knew him as he did not even know himself.

"Little things which I had suspected in college showed themselves as real traits of character when he met the world. He gambled just a little of course and when he gambled he drank and he could not be relied upon in his business. That little trick of getting through exams by hook or crook became a dreadful worry to me and my worries were justified. Yet I loved him and I wanted to marry him; he claims today when we chance to meet through our business that he still wants to marry me. But I can't bring children into the world with a cheated inheritance.

"The men with whom I work? Many of them are fine pals who would make good husbands perhaps for the woman who would take them as they are, faded, nerve wrecked, broken in health as the result of their young days. If I were selfish, I might marry any one of three as soon as I say, 'Yes.' No, I'm not a brute and deliver me from a perfect man who is too good to be human."

WRITE YOUR VIEWS
Was she right in refusing to marry the man whom she loved and still loves for that matter? Appleton women discuss these problems freely in their own circles and their theories would be of interest to many. Do you think that the modern matrimonial problem is caused by women who have lost the desire for a home or by the men who play around during their youth in such a way as to make

PROPHETS WRONG AS TO HARD WINTER

(Special to Post-Crescent)
New York — Weather prophets some months ago were predicting a long, hard winter for this country, which so far certainly failed to materialize.

If all those who undertake to "predict the future" were put in jail, for their wrong predictions, it seems as though the jails ought to be filled with weather prophets, judging from many past experiences.

Usually, weather is "predicted" only a few hours ahead, or a day or so at most, and this is all that the average scientific meteorologist ever hopes to predict. He endeavors to foretell the next day's weather by observations of the barometer, thermometer, anemometer (an instrument which registers the pressure of the wind), the polytherm, which is a device for registering humidity, dew-point, etc., and by means of other scientific instruments.

In addition to this, he is in touch with many other parts of the world by telegraph, and hears the sort of weather which they are having in any given locality, and foretells the weather for his own vicinity by calculating the time it would take to travel the necessary distance—the wind being of a certain, ascertained velocity.

them until mates for the girls whom they might otherwise marry. Write your ideas on the subject in 200 words to the contest editor of the Post-Crescent, signing your own name. Your identity will not be disclosed in anyway.

CITY ZONING IS LAW TO PROHIBIT MISUSE OF LAND

L. S. Smith, City Planner, Illustrates His Lecture in Vocational School

What a properly prepared and properly administered zoning law will do for Appleton was illustrated by Prof. Leonard C. Smith, city planner, in an address before city officials and citizens generally in the vocational school Friday evening. Mr. Smith, who is connected with the University of Wisconsin, delivered his address after a careful survey of the city and illustrated his lecture with lantern slides which showed scenes in Milwaukee, Appleton and several other cities.

"Appleton is at the parting of the ways," Prof. Smith said. "A beautiful and convenient city today, unless protected, the near future will see bad conditions of living and of doing business. It is much more important to prevent mistakes than to prevent them after once made."

"Zoning does not mean the destruction of present structures but rather insurance that when new buildings are built the right kind of structure erected in the right place will take the place of present wrong and unsuited structures," Mr. Smith declared.

"Zoning may be defined," he said, "as the creation by law of districts in which regulations, differing in different districts, prohibit injurious or unsuitable structures and use of structures and land. Thus, just as we have a place for everything in a well-regulated home, so we should have a place for everything in a well-regulated town. It would be a strange housewife who insisted upon keeping her gas range in the parlor, and her piano in the kitchen, and yet we have many cities that locate their gas tanks adjacent to parks, garages next to schools, boiler shops next to hospitals, stables next to churches, and retail stores indiscriminately sprinkled among dwelling houses. Such cities need a zoning or districting law to protect the city development. Such a law is easy to apply at some stage, but if delayed too long, functions imperfectly or not at all. Zoning laws should be passed under the police power of the state and not by condemnation. Thus, zoning will come from the exercise of the police powers of the state, and housing must relate to the health, safety, morals, order, and general welfare of the community. Reasons for such exercise of police powers are found in fire risk, lack of light and air, congested living quarters, and other conditions inimical to the general welfare."

"Fortunately this most important phase of town and city planning is the very easiest and cheapest to apply. In view of this fact, and also the additional consideration that the application of zoning secures the most needed protection, it is truly remarkable that so far the constitutions of only seven states permit of zoning. Fortunately Wisconsin is one of the seven states."

The entire purpose of zoning laws is to insure the creation of the right building in the right place. Where proper zoning laws have been in force they have prevented the usual wasteful, inefficient, and haphazard growth so typical of American cities. Real estate men have learned to regard zoning laws, not as restrictions but as protections to real estate values.

Many people think of zoning as a negative thing, that it means simply the keeping of objectionable industries out of districts intended or now used for residences. Zoning does accomplish this, but it also does more for it promotes the welfare of all classes of buildings. Careful study of results is all that is required to prove that the scattering of factories all over a city, not only destroys the value of adjacent houses, but even more seriously interferes with the growth and operation of the factories themselves. Factories so located are very apt to be lacking in railroad transportation as well as in room for future expansion, except at abnormal high costs of land, since the adjacent houses must be moved away or destroyed.

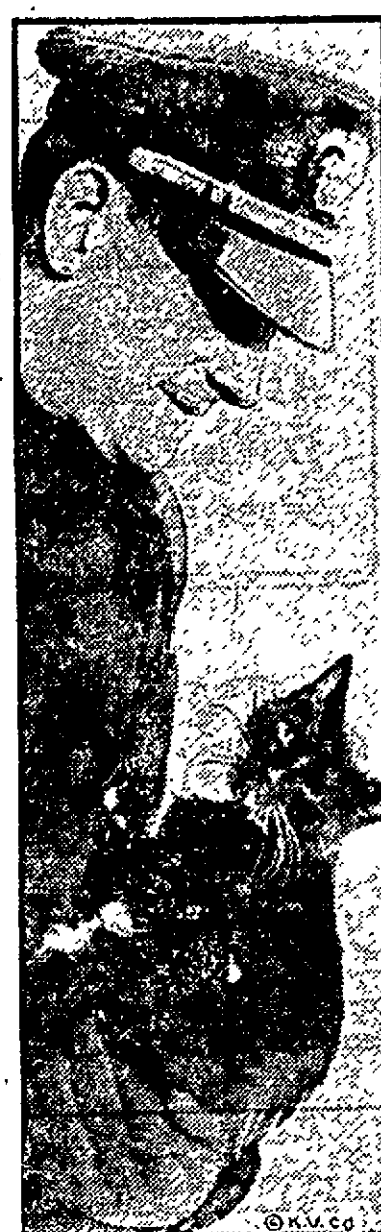

Viewing this situation from another standpoint, Fresno, California issued zoning ordinances which prohibited the erection of dwellings in the industrial district. Every experienced city official present must have known the impossible task which confronts your city engineer when he attempts the planning of the sizes of water pipe, or sewer pipe, or the best type of pavement, or its proper width for expected traffic, not knowing whether the district served is to ultimately be used for residences or for manufacturing or business. It is most encouraging to believe that our growing vision or municipal efficiency will cause us to turn to zoning as a powerful aid to much needed economy in public expenditures.

Owners of residence property, feeling the need of protection to their clients, but unable to secure it by public zoning have had recourse to private restrictions. Such efforts, because the restrictions or protections were inelastic, have not infrequently been disappointed and difficult of administration. The ideal condition is that, soon where a city planning commission, and the city council, after a scientific study of the whole city, having in mind both past and future growth and development, plan the zoning of the entire city. Such a commission would hold many public meetings to receive objections as well as constructive suggestions before such an important measure should be passed. Experience of other cities indicates that such a measure should be well understood by the entire citizenship.

The laboring man, as owner of a modest home, which perhaps represents his entire savings, is benefited by a zoning law most of all and therefore should be greatly interested in such a law.

What a properly prepared and properly administered zoning law will do for Appleton was illustrated by Prof. Leonard C. Smith, city planner, in an address before city officials and citizens generally in the vocational school Friday evening. Mr. Smith, who is connected with the University of Wisconsin, delivered his address after a careful survey of the city and illustrated his lecture with lantern slides which showed scenes in Milwaukee, Appleton and several other cities.

BLITZEN BACK

Blitzen, the champ rat catcher of the Hoboken piers, is back home again. Blitzen looked over South America, but didn't think much of it. Dock workers grieved when Blitzen disappeared and were happy three months later when R. Schultz, officer of the S. S. Huron, walked ashore with the cat in his arms. Blitzen boarded his ship at Rio, Schultz said.

TWO HOLSTEIN COWS MAKE FINE RECORDS

E. F. Tellock and John Taegle Win Commendation from Holstein Official

E. F. Tellock and John Taegle, leading breeders of Holstein cows in this locality, have been commended by Malcolm H. Gardner, superintendent of advanced registry production of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, for records made by their best cows in 7-day tests.

Mr. Tellock's cow, Calumet Dinali Aggie, 15, aged seven years and two months, produced 831.5 pounds of milk and 29.12 pounds of fat, or the equivalent of 25.15 pounds of butter during the week's test.

The Taegle cow which received official mention is Ormsby, Cornelia, three years and two months, producing 233.2 pounds of milk and 17.38 pounds of fat or 21.52 pounds of butter in seven days. Her 14-day test showed 893.2 pounds of milk and 33.21 pounds of fat or the equivalent of 41.52 pounds of butter.

Mr. Gardner says dairymen appreciate more and more the benefits resulting from official testing which was begun in 1923. There are now 15,000 Holsteins entered for test in the United States.

CHANGES IN LAW DELAY ISSUANCE OF TAX BLANKS

Collector of Internal Revenue Offers Suggestions for Making Returns

People who planned to relieve their minds of income tax worries right after Jan. 1 by filling out their federal returns will have to carry this burden a little longer, because the necessary blanks will not be ready until late in January. This announcement by A. H. Wilkinson, collector of internal revenue follows advice to his office that changes in the law have delayed prompt issuance of the printed matter.

No word has been received granting time after March 15, the final filing date, in which to fill out blanks because of the present delay. Wisconsin banks will be allowed to claim as deduction on their federal income taxes amounts of money paid by them as tax on capital stock, according to a ruling of the bureau announced by Mr. Wilkinson. This tax has been a source of difficulty because it really is a tax on the stockholder and not on the bank. The banks, however, made a practice of paying it in all cases, necessitating each stockholder crediting the tax payment on his federal return as a receipt.

Single persons with net income of $1,000 or more and married persons with net income of $2,000 or more are required to file returns.

In the making of an income tax return for the year 1921, every taxpayer should present to himself the following questions:

What were your profits from your business, trade, profession, or vocation?

Did you receive any interest on bank deposits?

Have you any property from which you received rent?

Did you receive any income in the form of dividend or interest from stocks or bonds?

Did you receive any bonuses during the year?

Did you make any profit on the sale of stocks, bonds, or other property, real or personal?

Did you act as a broker in any transaction from which you received commissions?

Are you interested in any partnership or other firm from which you received any income?

Have you any income from royalties or patents?

Have you any minor children who are working?

Do you appropriate, or have the right to appropriate, the earnings of such children? If so, the amount must be included in the return of income.

Has your wife any income from any source whatsoever? If so it must be included in your return or reported in a separate return of income.

Did you receive any directors' fees or trustees' fees in the course of the year?

Do you hold any office in a benefit society from which you receive income?

Answers to all of these questions are necessary to determine whether a person has an income sufficiently large to require that a return be filed and may be the means of avoiding the heavy penalties imposed for failure to do so within the time prescribed.

HOLIDAY MESSAGE TO TOURISTS GETS QUICK RESPONSE

Travelers Here Last Summer
Recall City's Hospitality and Courtesy

Almost every mail received by Hugh G. Corbett, managing secretary of the chamber of commerce, brings letters of praise from tourists who visited Appleton last summer, used the information bureau of the chamber, Albia park camp site or other of the city's conveniences.

These letters are in response to the Christmas greetings sent by Mr. Corbett to every tourist who registered while visiting in the city. These cards aroused memories of the city's hospitality and courtesy and Mr. Corbett believes many of the tourists will come to Appleton again.

This letter is an example of the expressions Mr. Corbett receives:

"Your card of Christmas greeting has touched a pleasant memory spot with me. The originality, atmosphere of courtesy and the attitude of good will toward your camper guests, certainly will appeal to all who have enjoyed your hospitality. In all my associations with tourists between here and the Lake Superior country everyone had a good word for Appleton."

You are to be complimented on the selection of the caretakers of your camp; Mr. and Mrs. Merkel, who made every effort to carry out the spirit for which the camp was intended."

Prosperity Of Body And Soul Is New Years Wish For People Of Appleton

City's Leaders Hope Appleton's People Will Continue the Fine Spirit of Cooperation They Have Shown in the Past

Appleton will have a happy and prosperous year when all the New Year's wishes of prominent men are fulfilled for the city and the people who live in it. The keynote of these well wishes is a continuance of the splendid community spirit and pride which has marked Appleton as one of the most "up and coming" cities of its size.

Here are the good wishes of ten or more men who voice the sentiments of many others who have the welfare of the city at heart:

J. A. Hawes, mayor—The mayor's New Year wish is for a Community building to be erected in a central location on a scale large enough to house all of the departments of the city government and all of the departments of county government that are not necessarily located at the present county court house.

This building to provide accommodation for the farmers in the community for such activities as they are interested in such as Farm Bureau, Stock Sales and all farm product development and sales, a rest room and auditorium.

Such a community building to provide housing for the Appleton women's club, chamber of commerce, Red Cross and other civic or welfare bodies that are organized for the improvement and development of this community.

Gustave Keller, postmaster—The Appleton post office force begs to express sincere gratitude to the people of our community for the hearty cooperation given during 1921 and wishes all God's choicest blessings for the New Year.

Rev. E. H. Peabody, Congregational church—Complete prosperity, full-orbed health is my New Year's wish for my neighbors of Appleton. A fine old verse of the scriptures says: "I pray that in all things thou mayest prosper and be in health even as thy soul prospereth."

I am sorry for people who have only physical health and material prosperity. To be ambitious for the abundant life, the highest happiness with first things first—this is a good slogan for a Christian in 1922.

Rev. J. A. Holmes, Methodist church—I have been splendidly impressed with Appleton and its spirit of progress. The one wish I have for its people is that the same spirit of enthusiasm toward higher ideals of life and service be continued through the years to come. Appleton to my mind is the most progressive town of its size in America and that is going some. My wish is that we may be earnestly alive to all great movements in the world today and that highest and best prosperity may come to one and all.

Dr. Samuel Plantz, president of Lawrence college—My wishes for Appleton during the coming year are a continuation of its fine civic spirit, its loyalty to home institutions and its appreciation of these cultural factors which make a city a pleasant place in which to live. I also trust that during the year we shall see the congestion of some of our streets relieved by a new bridge built across our noble river and a scheme of city planning adopted which will add to the beauty and efficiency of the city.

Mark Catlin—I wish for the people of Appleton and the state of Wisconsin, more faith in their brother men and less suspicion of their motives. I wish that during 1922 that we may take men for what they are worth. If this were possible there would be fewer misunderstandings, rising from the fact that we are always looking for an ulterior motive.

Judge Bottensack, county judge—For the people of Appleton I wish work, peace and contentment. What more could any one ask of a new year?

Judge Spencer, municipal court—I wish for Appleton that all the manufacturing institutions may run at full capacity so that those who are living by the day's wage may have steady employment and good pay, that the public officials who have charge of the spending of the city's money may realize how very hard it is for the majority of the people to get the money with which to pay their taxes and may govern their appropriations accordingly. I sincerely wish that the lessons which I have been giving moonshiners may also be lessons to the owners of the 500 more stills in cellars and garrets so that they may keep out of the workhouse.

Leo C. Thayer, principal of Appleton High school—I wish for Appleton a year of happiness and prosperity with plenty of work for all to do and all with the spirit of work. I wish for our people that fine desire for fellowship which will help us to meet our problems without bitterness or egotism or partisanship.

Lothar Graef, president of the Chamber of Commerce—My New Year's wish is for the improvement of our city not for the benefit of a few but for the greatest number of our citizens, that Appleton may become even a better city to live in, work in and do business in.

P. E. Bachman, president of the Trades and Labor Council. It is my wish for the city of Appleton and its people that there may continue a fine spirit of cooperation in all things which go toward making a city a pleasant and more wholesome place in which to live. I sincerely wish for a resumption of industry to relieve the financial strain on the majority of our people.

NEW SAWMILL WILL BE READY IN FEW WEEKS

The new saw mill of the Standard Manufacturing Co. will be in operation early next week and will be ready to commence operations by Feb. 1. The machinery has been ordered and is beginning to arrive. Everything about the plant is new and of the latest design. Enough logs have already been delivered by farmers to keep the plant busy for some time.

Chimney Fire

A chimney fire at the home of Frank M. Sanders, 923 Seymour-st., caused the fire department to make a call at the residence at 6:30 Friday evening. There was no damage.

Don't Delay Sending
For This Free Calendar

The calendar is a daily necessity to every household.

You cannot go through the year without one.

Furthermore, you want the right kind—one that is good to look at, and that does not take up too much room.

Our Washington Information Bureau will send you one that just suits in size, good looks and serviceability.

Another inducement is that this calendar is FREE. All you have to do is to send in your name and address, with two cents in stamps to pay return postage. In filling out the coupon print name and address or be sure to write plainly.

Frederic J. Haskin, Director,
The Appleton Post-Crescent
Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

I enclose herewith two cents in stamps for return postage on a free copy of the Calendar for 1922.

2,622 ALIENS IN THIS DISTRICT MADE CITIZENS

In the year 1921, in the courts attended by George N. Danielson of Appleton, naturalization examiner, 2,622 aliens were admitted to citizenship and 189 were denied citizenship by the courts upon request of the examiner. Mr. Danielson, who is spending the holidays with his parents in Appleton, leaves early next week for northern Michigan, where he will resume his examinations.

ROSENBERY'S FRIENDS
PLAN DINNER FOR HIM

Judge M. R. Rosenberry of the Wisconsin supreme court who is to deliver an address on "Christian Citizenship" before the People's Forum in Lawrence Memorial chapel Sunday evening, Jan. 8, will be the guest of honor at a banquet in the French room of the Sherman house the previous evening. The dinner is being arranged by friends here.

Twenty balloons a day will leave Pettibone's in the Rumage Sale Balloon Race. They are worth money to the finders.

PETTIBONE'S

HARD ON TIRES

Dad, you'd better watch your loose auto tires. The kids have a new game. They curl up on the inside of a tire and go looping down a grade. Anna Johanson, of San Francisco, can loop 200 times and still be able to stand.

PETTIBONE COMPANY TO HOLD BALLOON RACE

Beginning at 1 o'clock Tuesday and continuing through the week, 20 large gas filled balloons will be released from the roof of the Pettibone-Trade and Labor Council. They will carry with them tickets for prizes, redeemable at the Pettibone-Trade store. A major prize is being offered to the one returning the balloon which is found farthest from Appleton. Providing the weather and atmospheric conditions are favorable, some of the balloons may travel as far as 100 miles.

RAIL SOLUTION LIES IN ELECTRICITY

Economies and Advantages Over Steam Are Pointed Out
by U. S. Experts

Washington.—United electrical operation of the railroads of the country would revolutionize transportation, effecting great economy in money and effort, in addition to the admitted advantages in convenience and comfort to the public.

This is the conclusion reached by the United States Geological Survey after an intensive investigation.

Chief among the economies effected would be that of trackage. For instance, the Survey states, the entire traffic between Philadelphia and Washington could readily be carried over the rails of the Pennsylvania system under electrical operation, leaving those of the Baltimore and Ohio for future growth.

Similarly, electric operation in the vicinity of Boston and New York would leave a margin of track capacity so great that no money need be spent for many years for further extension of track, it is shown.

The total cost 20 years hence, if electrification is begun now, the Survey states, would be less than the cost of the added track and terminal facilities necessary under steam operation to provide for the inevitable 100 per cent increase in traffic within that time.

If the operation were made electrical and unified, less men and machinery would be required. There is great waste now, the Survey holds, on account of separate reserves of motor power. Further, the steam locomotive can run but eight hours a day, while the electric locomotive can operate 20 hours.

Naturally economy of operation would result in reduction of both freight and passenger rates.

AN AUTHORITY THAT NO ONE EVER DISPUTES

There is at Washington one division of the government that is ever free from criticism as to its motives, even when its decisions are unpopular.

The head of the judicial branch of government—the Supreme Court—has had from its organization the reputation of being absolutely fair and unbiased in its findings, and its members enjoy the entire confidence and respect of the people of the country.

The interesting story of the Supreme Court is told in one of the series on Our Government being mailed monthly to the people of this community. It is an interesting, brief history of the court and its relation to the other branches of the government.

Shore Leave æ by Jack Lait

THEY say a sailor has a sweetheart in every port. That may be so, but it doesn't look it. Anyway, New York is regarded as a port of some considerable importance, and in New York the sailors wander about in stag groups, getting dizzy looking at the tall buildings, about the most sweetheartless and forsaken outfit that the eye may classify.

I have seen them especially on Sunday afternoons, for weekend leave is most popular on the liners and the cruisers and destroyers hanging about the harbor and the Hudson. On Sunday afternoons the streets, even famed Broadway, are relatively deserted. Then the uniformed jackies stand out more conspicuously, and their lonesomeness is most striking. Then they are noted, leaning against lamp-posts, lounging on corners, half-heartedly going in and out of the cheap beereries.

Sailors rarely have money to amount to anything. They are marked by their livery of the sea, a warning that advertises to the great body of girls a hug in Central Park and a bus ride, but no cocktails in demi-tasses, no paper-mache cabarets, no taxis, no audible shows, no roof garden ritzy or roadhouse rough stuff. And in New York such notice automatically eliminates exactly 81 per cent of the potential femininity.

There are plenty of nice, honest, respectable and eligible girls who do not crave giddy dissipation. But they are girls who expect "serious intentions," and nobody takes a sailor seriously. So the butterflies don't want them and the grubs won't have them, and the sailors stand first on one foot and then on the other, light flag after flag, exchange lies, drag out the shore leave they coveted so expectantly, and conduct their dogs back to their ships to tell the stay-in-boats what a larkie time they had.

Now and then, though, a Jackie does score a "pick-up." And if there was one whom you'd bet on to land, I venture you'd pick Merri Encl.

Merriweather Encl, Jr., was the sole and single son of the best known citizen of New Essex, New Hampshire. The current edition of a long line of Anglo-Saxon stock, he had the inches and the complexion and the eyes of the Northern gods. He had been carefully—yes, exactly—reared to be a trader, an Episcopalian, a successor to his father and a credit to the town.

But somewhere in the Encl ancestry was the sea-going streak. Many of his forebears had been navigators. And so Merri got gooseflesh at the prospect of negotiating real estate deals, and chafed at the routine of small-town New England affairs. He was not rebellious or insubordinate, and it is likely that he would have bent to the life laid out for him had it not been for the war. When that came, Merri waited no longer, but enlisted in the navy. And he did service, such as fell his way.

When he was discharged, though, the salt had bitten too thoroughly into his veins. His absence abroad had given him an independence beyond his years and had given him the courage to talk back, even to his father. And when Merri made known that he proposed to follow the sea, he argued it out with his dad as man to man, stood pat and walked out. That caused an estrangement, if not a rupture. The old man hadn't threatened to "cut him off with a dime," or told him to "never darken my door again." But there was no weekly exchange of letters. Merri was to all intents and practical purposes an orphan dependent on his pay as a sailor before the smokestack, or whatever has taken the place of the mast as a modern figure for metaphor.

Thus he had all the financial, social and economic attributes of the common sailor, without losing or being able to lose or being particularly eager to lose the breeding and the charm of a hearty, healthy, high-schooled youngster. On shipboard they knew him as a bird who laughed and pranked, but who would fight. He mingled with the crew on even terms without ever being quite one of them. Merri was no snob, but neither was he a slob.

Like every sailor, like every man, he liked the girls. He was no sordid dive roisterer, seeking any kind of woman anywhere. He was romantic and selective. His romance ran to cute little ones, his selection ran right with it. He didn't sigh for Juchesses or crave debutantes. He would give an eye, though, to a snappy cutie, without first looking up her family tree or her pater's rating. He never flitted coarsely and never approached a strange woman with familiarities. But he stood where he could see and be seen, and if he saw what pleased his eye, and if what pleased his eye saw back and was pleased, Merri was not against walking a step or two to hyphenate, so to speak, the pleasures.

Flirting is mostly done that way and in that spirit. The crude "Haven't I met you somewhere?" is hokum, and a self-respecting white-wing wouldn't be guilty of it—only an occasional millionaire or foreign nobleman attempts it. The out-and-out wink is cut. But an eyelid may just happen to quiver; a man give a passing girl the up-and-down (nowadays it's usually the down-and-up), and keep right on walking; then he may turn, and she may turn, too; and if he turns at the same moment when she turns and their eyes meet, then it has clicked. Then the man is justified, if he seeks that sort of justification, in an about-face and double-quick, and he may raise his hat when he overtakes the girl, who will be walking slowly or having trouble picking her pretty way through sidewalk traffic, and he may say "Hello!" and fall in beside her, and there need be no camouflage.

Merri's technique operated in that manner to bring him up to the elbow of a nifty little blonde along the Central Park wall. She had a retousse noselet, round and appealing eyes and a tricky figure. She wore a becoming sweater and an intriguing ill-outdoor hat and walking boots. Obviously, she was neither an upper-crust flapper nor a working girl. Merri "pegged" her for a chorus pony. He didn't miss it very far—only about a month.

She took Merri's arm after a couple of blocks. Somehow, sailors' girls always take their arms. She called him "Mr. Sailor Man," and he named her "Cuddles," before even they had sat down on a bench.

Merri was a mixer of experience. He had taught himself to be not too impulsive. He had felt his blood shift gears over sloe-eyed Slovaks, seraphic Scandinavians, ribald Russians, chic Chinks and flaming French. But Cuddles got to him faster and harder than any girl he had ever known before. He found that she cramped his style badly. The regular run of small talk, the insinuating progression of ideas known to work the stray acquaintanceship up to a rapid verdict on how the parties "stood" with one another, he side-stepped.

They sat for two minutes, speechless. Then she sighed, a nervous, quick, spasmodic little sigh. And he sighed, a deep-drawn, eloquent big sigh. And they turned eyes toward each other's eyes. And both knew something was happening—had happened. And he said:

"A—lot of cars pass by here."

And she answered:

"Uhm—it's a one-way street. I live on this street."

She lived on this street? On Central Park West, in the upper Seventies? Rents along the one side which was inhabited were drawn, eloquent, big sigh. And they turned eyes toward each other, a glance up and down the avenue, huge apartment structures of granite and whiteness met his look. At the doors stood liveried doormen. Over the entrances to the curb were costly canopies. The street had the smell of high costs.

"I live over there," she picked it up, "in that apartment hotel."

He looked at that one, individually. It was up to the rest in everything, and beyond most of them in most things.

"Well, I hope you can afford it," he half laughed and half sighed.

"Don't lose any sleep about it, Mr. Sailor Man," she half sighed and half laughed. "My bills are all paid."

Something about the empha-gram in his mind. It accounted for her prosperous appearance, then; it explained the girl of young beauty and palpable "of-the-people" origin, at leisure in mid-afternoon of a work-day, strolling for air on the yellow-back line of the park parallelogram, flirting with a sailor. Merri nursed no illusions about the social stratum to which the seaman was assigned. When a woman listened to him—in uniform—he had her placed as one of several sorts—this one was of that sort, eh?

are said. Cuddles liked Merri on sight. And his demeanor had been a pleasant shock to her. And what he had now said jarred her and tickled her at once.

"Go 'way, Mr. Sailor Man," she told him. "This quick work, shows itself up."

"Why? Don't you believe I care for you?"

"Course not. How could you?"

"Don't you care for me?"

"I—well, that is, I—"

"Don't you care for me? Talk up; I won't take advantage of your answer. Don't you care for me—I mean a great deal?"

The girl hung her head.

Then she lifted and dropped it, slowly, gravely.

Merri's hand sneaked over and found her dimpled, soft, girlish hand, which had perhaps been born for work, but had created it, and which had certainly been born to be held in a big, strong hand; and was perfect for it.

"Then you can believe, can't you, that I love you?" he said, in her ear.

She lifted her face.

"Sailor Man," she breathed, "you've hit me a wallop so hard that I'm taking the count. This must be it, because I've heard a lot about it and never believed it, and now I feel it and don't remember anything like it ever before."

"I'm eighteen. And I'm an old-limer. I've played the riffraff around road shows, the come-and-go oleans around Broadway revues, and the silk-lined real class on the midnight roofs. When I say I've played 'em, I mean I've been a kid who had a yen for fast cars and whoopie parties and crepe lingerie and a few stones."

"I haven't been bad—not so good, but not so bad. By that I mean I haven't been a gold-digger or a grifter or a badger-worker or a setup. I never in my life answered a push note or a strange phone call, and, until this hour, never flirted or was flirted with. Believe me or not—I guess it sounds watery."

"My ideas about some things haven't always been just what the Sunday editorials and the advice to young girls in a large city laid down. Some of the items of life which have appealed to some of the big preachers and great writers and highbrow thinkers as vital and all-decisive in a girl's life haven't hit me as being the most important things, at all."

"My mother was a showgirl. My father was an architect. My father got dippy about my mother in a café. My mother never cared a hauf of ozone about my dad. But they stuck it along together for years. My father used to teach me how to eat with a fork and how to read the English language intelligently and how to do what I thought was right and tell the rest of the world to take the gate. And he taught me that a slight corruption of one of the three graces had crept in through constant misusage. The world had 'Volsteaded' those three sacred injunctions into 'Faith, Hope and Chastity.' He hadn't any prejudice against the third, but that third at one time had been billed as 'the greatest of these,' and that couldn't quite stand up under the new statute. He thought charity was still the greatest of these, even after it ceased to be named as being even one of these."

"So he took more pains to try and make me cheerful than he did to try and make me careful, and he cautioned me more against the pitfalls of false pride and fake prejudice than against the devil's temptations that lurk in the alcoholic content and in the velour landaulet."

"Maybe he did me a lot of harm. Maybe he didn't. Maybe I misunderstood just what he was shooting at, and maybe I got exactly his slant on ethics, morals, etiquette, political economy and feminine diplomacy."

"Anyway, I have found this: My dad had some great ideas, but he was a democrat in a republican world. The whole population seemed divided between a small gang of outlaws anxious to drag me far past where he ever dared to fear I'd venture, and the rest a committee on the whole to see that the book ideas were enforced to the letter—or thumbs down."

"I didn't string with the social bolsheviki to the limit. And I didn't scare as hard at the hip-pures as I might have. I sort of picked my own way along, falling for what I thought I had a right to do with myself what I wanted as long as it didn't cost anybody else anything—and discarding what offended my sensibilities, my conscience (such as it was), and my individual taste (such as that was)."

"Now, we don't have to do a Kellerman into all the details, I've told you a few things, and you can guess the rest according to your best lights. But I'll make you a proposition, Mr. Sailor Man."

"Across the street I have a giddy and gaudy a little layout as any girl in New York could ask. I don't have to work. I don't have to worry. I have a couple of thousand in the bank, besides, and a few trinkets that Uncle Levinsky wouldn't turn up his nose at. I have youth. I have a fair flock of looks. I have a lot to look forward to and I'm ready never to look back. Besides, what's a whole lot more, I think I love you."

"Now, I'm willing and ready to go across the street—with you—and pack, and beat it—also with you. I ask nothing. The rest is up to you."

Merri sat silent. His hand released her hand and found his own, and he dovetailed all his fingers in between the fingers of the other hand. He scraped his heel on the paving. He looked at her again for just the infant child of a second, out of the farthest corner of his near eye. Then he looked down again. Then he started to speak and decided it was not yet time. At last he spoke.

"Good-by, Cuddles," he said.

She looked at him sharply, intensely.

"That's it, then?" she asked, trying to keep the quaver out of her voice.

"It has to be," said he. "You've told me all about yourself. I've told you nothing about myself. I come from New Hampshire."

"What has that got to do with it? I wouldn't care if you came from Tasmania."

"If I came from Tasmania, everything would be different. But I come from New Hampshire. If you'd asked me ten minutes ago, I'd have told you I hated New Hampshire—and I thought I did. Why, I ran away from it—couldn't stand it—had no patience for it or sympathy with it. But I guess New Hampshire is in my blood. The new third grace isn't new there, and it has run the old one right into the sea and drowned it."

"Just a second," she said. "Have you always lived by it and up to it?"

"Oh, no—it was written for women."

"Did you ever read that paragraph, in the same book, I believe, which had something to do with lifting up a certain girl, and throwing stones, and smiling no more?"

"Yes. But I was taught, like most Christians, to do as the superintendent of the Sunday school ruled, not according to what had been ruled before, by holier teachers. I thought I resented it. I thought I hated it. I thought I was running away from it. But I wasn't. Good-bye, Cuddles. Good luck to you."

And he rose.

"Good-bye," said she. "Good-bye, Sailor Man," and she rose. "Some time, when you're out at sea, will you think of one girl of the millions, in one fat of the millions, who may be thinking of you?"

"I'll think of you often," he said. "But not at sea. I'm going back to New Hampshire—where I belong."

She Took Merri's Arm After a Couple of Blocks.

"That's too bad," he said.

"What's too bad—for what?"

"Oh, nothing. It's none of my business. You've known me half an hour, and I'm not going to start in rewriting your life or passing any uncalled-for opinions as to this and that. But I don't mind a bit telling you this hurts me."

"Don't be a sap," she half whispered. "I'm nothing to you. You never saw me before. It's going to bother you a whole lot, when you're out in the middle of some ocean that I even couldn't pronounce, and I'm up there in one of the dozens of flats in one of the thousands of buildings in one of the towns where you once took a walk, isn't it?"

"Maybe," he said. "There are millions of girls in millions of places, but to everybody somewhere there is one in one place, and as he shuts his eyes and takes in the whole world, that one of all the hundreds of millions, in that one isolated spot in the billions of acres that hold all sorts of dwellings, from dives to palaces—that one in that spot outweighs all the others bound together in all the rest of the world."

"And I suppose there is one, some place, who'll shine for you when you're miles away, and there are lots of dames, or señoritas, or mamselles, or houris, or geishas right close?"

"There is."

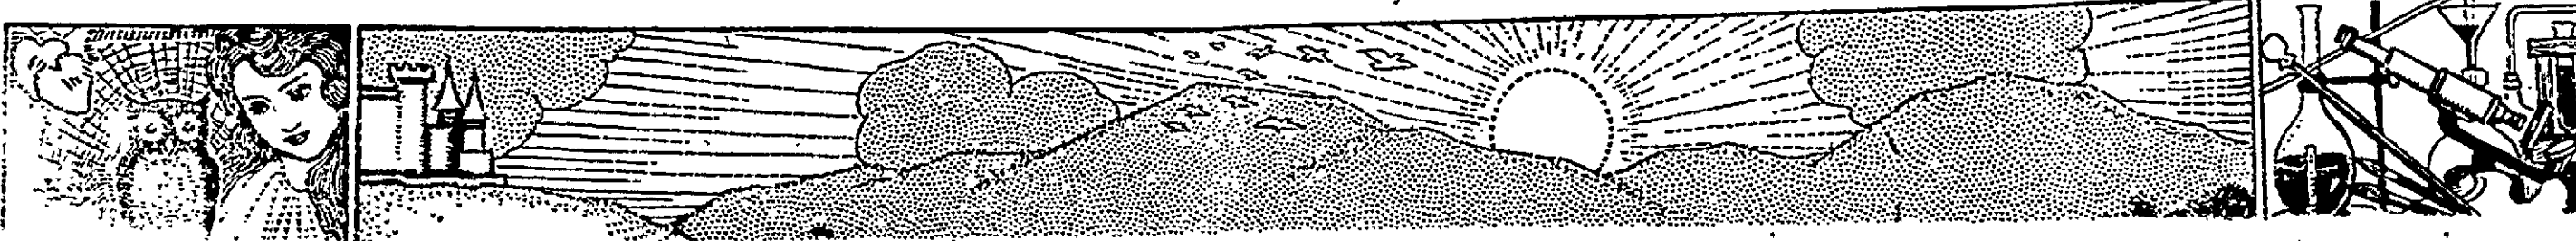

"And where will she be?"

"Across this street, in that building."

She caught her breath midway in her windpipe. Bromidic as such answers may be to reading, cavedropping, listening-in or listening-on audiences, they may still carry the suspense, the surprise, the climax and those other ingredients which compose drama to those who say them and to those unto whom they

LABOR ENTERS NEW YEAR WITH SOLID FRONT -- GOMPERS

Unions Will Continue to Do Battle Against Greed, Leader Declares

Washington—Union labor looks out over the new year with a "determination to do battle for the toilers and common humanity," declared Samuel Gompers Friday in a statement to the United Press.

"The American labor movement enters the new year with confidence, with determination, with purpose and with a faith untouched by the bitterness of the attack leveled against it by unthinking and predatory forces during the year that has gone," Mr. Gompers said.

"Labor's solidarity is greater than ever. Each day it gains a fuller comprehension of the need for putting the last ounce of energy into the struggle against greed. Labor is no longer easily fooled by false doctrines."

"During the year many influences have sought to undermine or disrupt the labor movement. Certain employers sought to reduce wages sweepingly. They started out bravely to bring about reductions of 20 per cent and more. The attack began with tanks and ends at the close of the year with lame infantry."

"The only attack upon labor which retains its mid-1921 vigor is the attack by the courts. The injunction goes on and the courts become more creacible to the suggestion that injunctions be issued."

GERMANY IS AFTER ATLANTIC TRADE

Rate War Among Steamship Companies May Wreck U. S. Ship Board

(Special to Post-Crescent)

Berlin—A new trans-Atlantic freight war, which the United States Shipping Board will lose after having caused losses to all shipping companies, is predicted by officials of the Hamburg-American line, as the result of the shipping boards intention to put three new, large steamers on the New York-Plymouth-Cherbourg-Bremen-Danzig route.

"The Hapag-Harriman steamers America and George Washington are already covering the route," a high official of the Hamburg-American line said to the United Press. "The Hapag," however, is not doubtful of the outcome of the rate war the shipping board's action will cause."

"The transatlantic shipping pool, comprising the Hapag, Harriman and several other big American lines, as well as big English, French, Belgian, Italian and Dutch lines, will be obliged to protect their members against the shipping board, which is thus faced with overwhelming opposition, even if it obtains the support of the North German Lloyd, which does not belong to the pool."

"Nevertheless the Hapag is worried over the general loss such a means all round, whatever the outcome, as happened in the recent freight war between America on one side and French and English lines on the other. The freight rates sank, below the pre-war standard, and did not even pay for bunker coal."

HUNT INSURANCE MAN WHO MURDERED BANKER

By United Press Leased Wire

Oklahoma City, Okla.—A sheriff's posse Friday hunted Oklahoma county in search of Schnell Rector, an Oklahoma City insurance agent who is wanted in connection with the death of F. W. Brindley, president of the Mustang State bank, who was shot and killed in the front yard of his home at Mustang Thursday night.

The fatal shooting was said to have followed a quarrel over possession of an automobile.

OIL WELL KEEPS UP VOLCANIC OUTPOURINGS

By United Press Leased Wire

Orange, Tex.—The new Orange oil fields became an area of roaring, screeching turmoil with oil and gas spouting skyward Friday when Humble company "Cressen No. 2" broke loose again and spattered the country in a half mile radius with crude petroleum.

Simultaneously wells in the field that had been "dry" for some time came to life and spouted.

NAB BANDIT PAIR AFTER HOLOUP OF RESTAURANT

By United Press Leased Wire

New York—Two bandits were arrested after a pistol battle with police in Brooklyn Friday, following an attempt to rob a restaurant.

This gun fight culminated a series of crime reported from various parts of the city, as the holiday wave of robberies and holdups continued.

ST. PAUL HAS EYE ON MANAGER GOV'T

Rejects Return to Aldermanic Form at Special Election By Big Vote

St. Paul—St. Paul turned down a chance to return to the aldermanic form of government at a special election.

Only two wards gave the proposed new city charter majorities. The vote and 16,123 for it. To pass the proposition needed 60 per cent of the vote cast.

Little more than half of the registered vote was cast, and not more than a quarter of the total possible vote turned out.

The fight for and against developed a spectacular newspaper war. Opponents of the new charter promised to submit a city manager plan of government in 1922 to supplement the present city commission form.

BURGLARS LOOT SUMMER HOMES AT CRYSTAL LAKE

Milwaukee—Burglars carried away large quantities of liquor, clothing and other articles from summer homes at Crystal Lake in Sheboygan county, it became known here Thursday night.

The homes are largely owned by Milwaukee men. John H. Pichung was the heaviest loser. He stated last night that the aged liquor taken by the burglars was irreplaceable. His home was equipped with Yale locks, the burglars having cut holes through the doors large enough to insert their hand so as to manipulate the locks.

The homes of F. J. Walthers, Milwaukee, and E. F. Eichenberger, Plymouth, also were entered.

EARLY TRIAL OF "FATTY" ASSURED

Both Sides Say No Delays Will Be Asked When Case is Called Jan. 9

By M. D. Tracy

By United Press Leased Wire

San Francisco—Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, will be tried a second time for manslaughter growing out of the death of Virginia Rappa unless something entirely unforeseen happens within the next few days to alter this determination.

Both District Attorney Matthew Brady and Gavin McNab, chief of Arbuckle's defense, agreed on that statement Friday.

Not only did they agree that the trial would proceed, but both were making preparations highly elaborate for it.

"We insist that Arbuckle be tried without delay and will oppose any attempt to postpone the case," McNab declared, speaking for the defense.

"We will be ready and anxious to go ahead Jan. 9," was the statement from the district attorney.

To Take Up Practical Electricity—225 Men Placed In Well-Paid Positions in Past Ninety Days—We Teach You in Six Months

It is a well known fact that several million people are out of employment and yet there is a steady demand for men with a practical electrical training. This is proven by the fact that 225 graduates of the School of Practical Electricity have secured jobs with our help in the last three months.

for men to get into permanent paying work than by taking this short course in practical electricity.

How You Can Qualify

Men and boys with only a common school education can qualify. We put you right in the thick of the work right in

Hundreds of men today are glad to get any kind of work at the wages of a common laborer and yet these same men could multiply their earning power by taking a short course in Practical Electricity which would qualify them to take jobs in public service stations, manufacturing plants, in wiring and testing generators, in winding armatures and testing transformers. This is work which calls for a specialized knowledge and cannot be gained in any other way than study and practical experience.

Now Is the Time

Babson, the statistical expert, predicts that the electrical business will have the biggest boom of any line of industry during the next two years. Electricity with its future possibilities is just in its infancy. There was never a greater opportunity

At the end of six months you can call yourself a practical electrical trained man and be one. You can hold down any job which calls for a practical knowledge of wiring and testing armature winding, motor testing and maintenance or hold a position as foreman or superintendent.

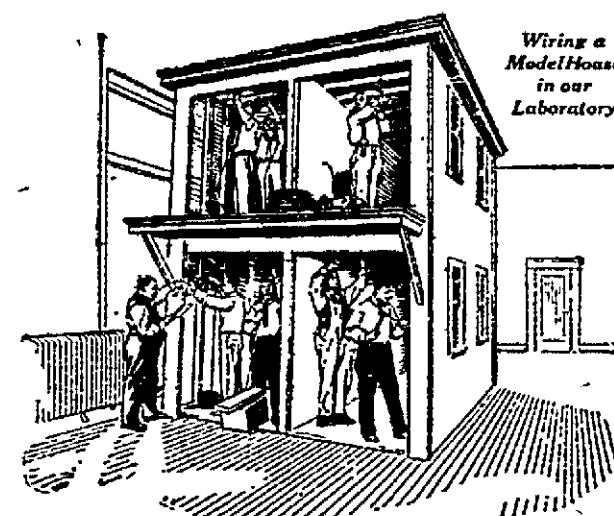

Act Immediately

First of all, send for our 40-page illustrated catalog which will be sent FREE upon request. If you want to start with a class which begins January 5th, come visit the school as soon as you finish reading this announcement. We will get you in the thick of the work the very day you enroll.

May The New Year Be Bright

To our patrons and friends and to all the people of this community we extend our sincerest wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Happiness and prosperity depend partly on luck and a good deal on the effort made to attain them.

To the young people of this community who desire both happiness and prosperity, and to attain them are turning over new leaves for the year to come, we would suggest some of them are the leaves of a savings bank book.

LETTERS TO LOVERS

An Unforgiving Wife

By Winona Wilcox

For the sake of her child, the wife of a disloyal husband is often expected to forgive the past. Though many try, few succeed, for terrible is the ordeal.

Consider the following graphic bit of evidence concerning one wife's struggle to forgive. In this letter layers of psychology are revealed to any student of the human mind and behavior.

"Three years ago my husband found a woman he loved better than me and he broke all his vows. After I discovered the truth, he promised to live like a gentleman, but last summer he became infatuated with a third woman. He had to beg my forgiveness again and he made the usual promises.

"I said I would forgive him. He has been devoted to me since that time, but somehow I have lost all confidence in him.

"There are times when I think I hate him, times when I wish he would go away out of my sight forever.

"And then, when he is sick, and once when he was hurt in an auto accident, I think how dreary my life would be alone.

"He was very sick recently. I thought that my chance for revenge had come. I decided not to take care of him and he needed a great deal of care. But of conscience I would not let me neglect him, no matter how cruelly he had wronged me.

"I go through the round of wifely duties with some courage, but never can love my husband as I once did. He seems to think I can.

"Sometimes when he puts his arms around me I stiffen at his touch. I see the other woman in my place. I start to run my fingers through his hair. I remember that another woman has done the same. I shrink away from him.

"I have tried hard to forgive and forget the past, but it comes into my mind like a flash of lightning when he makes love to me. I dwell upon his treachery, and sometimes I am sorely tempted to take my life.

"But I have two children. I am not yet 30. I am prettier than I used to be. And I do so crave a little genuine love from a real man. I so need the comfort of a true man's strength. I cannot leave him for I am not qualified to support my children.

"My husband swears that he loves me—but he has lied about it once too often. He loves himself, and any woman who will flatter his egotism.

"How can I end this craving to be loved?"

"What can I do to make life worth while?"

Part of this letter might have been written by almost any wife of almost any faithless husband. It has been printed in this series as of more importance to men than to women. It is a rare revelation of the feelings that move the unforgiving wife.

That every moment of happiness a husband finds in an irregular romance, his wife pays in nights of weeping, in the throes of outraged faith, in the travail of just jealousy. All his careless joy is at the cost of her sorrow—a sorrow which she cannot end by any effort of the will.

These are some of the mysteries about a woman's heart which men should know.

Adventures of the Twins

Olive Roberts Barton

The Sack of Gold

"Oh," cried the Twins to Mr. Ribbon Fish. "We thought you were the end of the rainbow."

"Humph!" exclaimed Mr. Ribbon Fish, wriggling his beautifully colored but cross-thin body in surprise. "And why were you following me just because you thought that I was the end of the rainbow?"

"We want the bag of gold that the gnomes stole from the Fairy Queen," answered Nick, "and they are known to have buried it where the rainbow ends. One end came down into the sea and we thought you were it."

"Glad," said the Ribbon Fish thoughtfully. "And you say it was in a bag. I do believe I can help you. Only this morning I saw a sack lying around somewhere, and it looked awfully full of something. Let me see. Where was it? Oh, yes, now I remember. It was away out in the ocean where the side of an island slants down into the water. Come along and I'll show you."

So off they all started. Pretty soon they came to a slanty place, deep, deep under the sea, and sure enough, there lay a sack, propped against a smooth stone, and looking, as the Ribbon Fish said, most awfully full of something.

"Ho, ho!" cried out Nick. "This certainly looks like the Fairy Queen's bag of gold, Mr. Fish. Only I don't see any rainbow."

"Oh, as for that," said the fish making a lasso out of his long tail and then untying it again, "you only see a rainbow when it's wet."

Nobody thought that he'd said anything queer.

"I'll take one end and you take the other, Nancy," said Nick, "and we'll take the bag of gold to the Fairy Queen at once."

But lo and behold, wasn't the sack swimming away as hard as it could go. It had unfolded a most beautiful pair of swimming fins.

Chafing Dish Recipes

If you give a luncheon and have no maid to help you why not prepare the hot course in the chafing dish. The dish is sure to be hot and the hostess need have no uneasy moments, as she simply watches her concoction while the first course is being eaten.

A chafing dish luncheon is quite as delightful as a chafing dish supper and could well solve the problem for the girl who must entertain without a maid.

These recipes are seasonable for winter days and are reasonably economical.

CHICKEN A LA KING

One chicken, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 eggs (yolks), 1 teaspoon grated onion, 2 cups milk, 1 cup cream, ½ cup mushrooms, 2 green peppers, 2 pimientos, salt and pepper.

If fresh mushrooms are used, fry in butter till tender. Pour boiling water over peppers and let stand five minutes. Then slip off the top and remove seeds and cut into shreds. Cut pimientos into shreds. Boil chicken and cut in meat dice, using both light and dark meat.

Melt butter in layer of chafing dish. Stir in flour. Slowly add milk, cream and onion. Cook until thick and smooth. Add chicken and yolks of eggs well beaten. When thickened, add mushrooms and peppers. Cook five minutes longer and serve on triangles of toast.

SHRIMP WIGGLE

One and one-half cups shrimp, 1 can peas, 1½ cups milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 1½ tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk. When thick and smooth season with salt and pepper. Add parsley, shrimp and peas and cook until you are sure the peas and shrimp are heated through. Serve very hot on toasted crackers.

CREAMED TUNA FISH

Two cups tuna fish, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 cups cream, 3 hard boiled eggs, 2 pimientos, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon celery salt.

Melt butter and stir in flour. Add salt and gradually add cream. When mixture is boiling, add tuna fish broken in coarse flakes, hard boiled eggs cut into slices and pimientos and celery salt and serve very hot on toast.

RICED DUTY

Three cans tomatoes, 1 cup grated cheese, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-½ teaspoon

STOEFF WINS HARD MATCH AT GALENA

Henry Stoff, the Sheboygan wrestler, won two straight falls from Frank Fowler of Charles City, Mo., before a large audience at Galena, Ill., Tuesday evening. This was Stoff's second appearance on the mat at Galena and he has been accepted as one of the best matmen that has appeared in the Illinois city.

The first fall was won in 35 minutes, 30 seconds with a body scissors and back lock. The final fall came in 24 minutes, 40 seconds with an arm and head scissors. Fowler was in good condition and gave the Sheboygan man a hard fight.

Stoeff will meet Jim White a veteran matman, Sunday afternoon at the Eagles hall, Sheboygan.

JABBER YOUNG WORKING HARD FOR NEARY FIGHT

"Jabber" Young, the Menasha welterweight who has been matched to meet Tommy Neary in a semi-final of the Mitchell-Leonard fight in Milwaukee Monday evening, is training hard and going good, according to reports from his training quarters in the S. A. Cook armory, Neenah.

"Jabber" is using three of four tough sparring partners every day to condition him for the coming fray.

Young has been matched to meet Dennis O'Keefe, one of Chicago's greatest welterweights in the headline of a boxing card to be given at Chicago, Jan. 11.

Unless the unexpected should happen, it would seem that Detroit had lost all chance of getting shortstop Everett Scott. Cobb had hoped to build up his infield around this veteran star. Now that he has gone to New York, in exchange for Peckinpaugh, it would seem Detroit hadn't a lock in.

HORSEPLAY PUT MACK'S ATHLETICS OUT OF RUNNING

Babe Ruth's Injuries Last Fall Were Due to Friendly Wrestling Match

By Billy Evans
Star ball players often do the most reckless things at the most inopportune times.

Their carefree attitude in a number of cases have seriously impaired their own usefulness as well as caused their club owner much worry, mentally and financially.

Wrestling in the clubhouse, which is usually filled with benches, concrete posts and other obstructions, is a favorite amusement. Rough house on the Pullman, with only the narrow aisleway to work in, is another happy thought.

Back in 1905 "Rube" Waddell, while in a playful spirit, juror about kated any chance Connie Mack had to beat the New York Giants in the world series.

In the east there is a certain day in the fall when the straw hat becomes taboo. If a fellow chooses to wear one, he does so at his peril.

Friends of his are always liable to bust the lid. Very often a scuffle ensues while the act is being staged.

Coming into the Pullman, as the Athletics were pulling out of Boston one evening late in the fall, "Rube" spied one of the players still using a straw skypiece. "Rube" decided to smash the straw. He sneaked up carefully and was just about to pounce on the hat when the owner spied him.

A scuffle resulted in which Waddell finally managed to put the straw hat out of commission. However, before he had accomplished his purpose, he had suffered an injury to his left arm and back which rendered him useless for the rest of the season.

Now that the American League pennant race of 1921 is over, also the world series, it is breaking faith to tell of a little incident that for a time threatened to put the New York American League club out of the race.

TWO STARS WERE INJURED
The team had just finished its final trip through the west and had been most successful. The club jumped into Washington before coming home to stage a couple of games there.

Just before the train pulled into Washington "Babe" Ruth and Wally Schang got into a friendly wrestling match over some trivial thing. The first clash resulted in a draw, some of the players finally making the two quit their kidding, which some of the fans feared might result in an injury to either of the stars.

Ruth is just a big kid. He wasn't satisfied that he had been unable to make Schang yell enough. Now Schang is one of the huskiest players in the game. Although "Babe" is considerably larger, Schang was a match for him.

Once more the two went at it. Although the spirit was friendly, yet each was giving the best he had. Suddenly Schang shifted his style, gave Ruth a sudden shove, and the two of them tumbled over the side of the seat onto the floor. That ended the wrestling.

MIGHT HAVE COST PENNANT
The next day Ruth reported with a very lame back. It was given out that he had slept with a fan blowing on him and had contracted a bad cold. Schang said his arm and back were hurting him as a result of collision at the picnic a few days before.

As a matter of fact the two were out of the lineup at a most important time simply because they chose to be playful on a Pullman. However, there is always a bit of sunshine when the gloom seems thickest.

The injury to Schang made it necessary that Manager Huggins use Catcher Devermer. The foolishness of Ruth and Schang gave Devermer his chance. He made the most of it. Inside of a week he had convinced Manager Huggins and all the New York critics that the Yankees had a most promising backstop.

Previous to this Devermer had gone for about four months, and had been permitted to catch only about two innings. Necessity, created by foolishness, gave him his big chance. He made good with a vengeance. The Yanks need not worry about the catching department.

DUNDEE AND JACKSON
GO 15 ROUNDS TO DRAW

By United Press Leased Wire
New York—Johnny Dundee, junior lightweight champion, and Willie Jackson fought 15 rounds to a draw Friday night in Madison Square garden. The decision was well received by a crowded house. In the semi-final, Kid Norfolk won an 8 round decision from Jamaica Kid.

TEX RICKARD PAYS HALF MILLION IN FIGHT TAXES

By United Press Leased Wire
New York—Since he took charge of Madison Square garden in August, 1920, Tex Rickard has paid out $525, 317 in federal and state taxes. Of this amount New York state received $101,097. The total attendance at boxing and wrestling shows was 2,237,127.

CAPTAIN STEIN STARS ON W. AND J. ELEVEN

Besides Stein W. & J. will not put any nationally famous players on the California gridiron.

Erickson, a lock, is a remarkable performer and ranks next to Stein in value.

Kopf is the best end they have. He gained a reputation this year by catching a forward pass and scoring the touchdown that enabled W. & J. to beat Pittsburgh 7 to 6.

West is one of the fastest backs in the country, but not good as Erickson for general all round play.

Frazer's Crop Goes To New York

Today's Sport Angle

By Billy Evans

Major league magnates need have no further fear as to winter baseball.

Six months ago most of the big league club owners were all fussed up over the proposed California Winter League.

When the scheme was first launched, it was proposed to take 25 or 30 major league stars to the coast. This movement caused much discussion among the magnates.

It was the general belief that the added 10 weeks would make the players stale. Likewise the possibility that some of them might be injured was an additional worry. There was also the fear that some of the players might not keep in condition with nothing at stake.

It was the original intention of the magnates to try to have Judge Landis stop the post-season games. Evidently the judge decided it would be unwise to do so. It turned out to be an excellent move not to try to prevent the players from going to the coast.

Such action would have created ill feeling among the players. That would have worked against harmony on the various teams concerned.

The winter league finished the season, but it proved conclusively these facts:

Coast league fans get enough baseball during the regular season. Unless all the clubs are made up of stars there is little or no interest. Only four big leaguers made the trip—Sisler, Hornsby, Cobb and Heilmann. After having once seen these four stars, the punch was gone.

The season was a big failure financially. Only rain insurance saved the promoters from a big loss.

The coast league magnates are now positive that winter ball is bad for the game in that section. It gives the fans too much baseball and takes the edge off the playing season.

The permitting of the four stars to go to the coast to launch a winter league was an excellent thing. It proved beyond a doubt that there was no demand for such an organization.

Will Invite County Cage Teams To Play In Tourney

Invitations soon will be sent to basketball teams at Hortonville, Black Creek, Seymour, Kaukauna and other towns and villages in Outagamie county, outside of Appleton, to arrange for a county tournament to be held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium here. The suggestion made a few weeks ago that the championship of the county be determined by a series of games in which all the county teams will take part, met with quick response and there now is every probability that efforts will be made to arrange for a tournament.

Rivalry between the county teams is intense, it is said. Most of the teams are evenly matched, insuring a well played tournament.

It is proposed to play the tournament in two or three days, depending on the number of teams entered. If there are more than four teams a tournament could be started on a Tuesday afternoon, when preliminaries would be played, and the final games could be scheduled for the following Friday evening.

It is almost certain that intense interest would be created in the county by a tournament of that nature and it is quite likely that Appleton fans would turn out to see the games. It would also be a means of bringing about a closer relationship between the city and the towns and villages of the county.

NEALE MAY QUIT
BIG LEAGUE BALL

"Grassy" Neale, who has had such great success as football coach at Washington and Jefferson, is seriously thinking of retiring from major league ball.

Neale has a number of years ahead of him as a big leaguer, yet it would occasion no surprise if he failed to report for spring training.

In making such a decision Neale would be acting wisely. At best he could not hope to stick for more than five more years in the majors. Minor league ball is not what it is cracked up to be, particularly for a player who has seen many years of major league service.

Neale's idea is to follow in the footsteps of Hugo Bezdek, who is director of athletics at Iowa State. Neale is eminently fitted to occupy a position similar to that held down by Bezdek. It is possible that W. & J. may offer such a berth to him. He is a star at basketball, basketball and football.

NICE WAY TO PLEASE
Judging from the way the magnates paid out fancy prices for ball players, the season of 1921 was most profitable. If the paying of such prices is due to the desire to beat the income tax, why not cut down the profits by reducing the price of admission? That would serve the purpose, and make a much bigger hit with fandom.

BATTLERS IN FINE SHAPE FOR SCRAP

By United Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee—Pinkey Mitchell stock in his fight with Benny Leonard here January 2 took a decided slump Friday when the champion favored some 400 fans with six rounds of boxing.

That the champion is in condition for his battle here is putting it lightly. He is in as good condition as it is possible for an athlete to be which proves he is not taking his New Year's day fight too lightly.

Denny boxed three rounds each with Midget Smith, Eddie Meade and Bob Miller. Smith is supposed to rank high as a tentam, but Leonard had him looking like a monkey.

Pinkey Mitchell is continuing his training to the Milwaukee Athletic club. He declared Friday that he was not looking for any the better of it in the weight question and that he would enter the ring weighing around 125 pounds.

Both Leonard and Mitchell will complete the boxing Saturday afternoon and will devote Sunday to setting up exercises and road work.

SPORT PROSPECTS FOR 1922 NOT AS BRIGHT AS 1921

Ban Johnson Thinks Baseball Attendance Will be Cut Down Next Year

By Henry L. Farrell
By United Press Leased Wire
New York—Leaders of sports have doubts about what 1922 holds in store.

The year passing out today may go down on the books as the greatest ever.

Ban Johnson, president of the American league, is rather pessimistic.

"Baseball is running on an inflated idea that every year must be better. When business gets better the fans will go back to work and they will not be filling the parks every afternoon," says.

Tax Rickard, who has put boxing over on its biggest scale in New York, says it is up to the promoters of sport to make their game good or bad.

"Next year ought to be just as good if not better than this year. As long as you give the public what it wants, you can do business," Rickard says.

While business of the professional sports may be just as good, the new year may have a slump in records.

With his big gun out of action for thirty days, Babe Ruth has an almost impossible task in breaking his bulky home run record.

Even the great Charley Paddock cannot be expected to sprint faster than he did during the past season.

Ned Gouldin, the great colored jumper of Harvard, has laid his books aside and he will have less chance of adding inches to his world's broad jump record.

The glamour of international sport may be less brilliant. The crowning event of the 1921 summer, the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, cannot be duplicated or repeated in America.

FORESTER TEAM LOSES TO SEYMOUR QUINTET

The Catholic Order of Foresters basketball team lost to the Seymour city team Friday night at Seymour, 29 to 17. Seymour showed real class, playing a snappy game which carried them on to a win.

The Forester team as made up of Reider, Kamps, Skall, Palmer and Fravel. The boys were unaccustomed to the playing floor and had considerable difficulty in getting started.

APPLETON LOSES TO FOND DU LAC BY 39-12 SCORE

Fountain City Team Plays Great Defensive Game — Two Rivers is Next

Fond du Lac's fighting basketball team put the skids under George Dame's pennant seekers in the Central Wisconsin basketball league at Fond du Lac Friday night, winning by a score of 39 to 12. Fond du Lac completely outclassed the Appleton quint, playing a wonderful defensive game and shooting baskets with great regularity.

Stark and Ritchie were the offensive stars for Appleton but they were closely guarded and couldn't get away with their usual game. Stark tossed in three baskets and Ritchie caged two. Thompson, at center, was so closely guarded that he did not make a finger and his floor work was cut down.

Rubitz and Waterpool played the guard positions but were unable to hold the Fond du Lac tribe.

The team made the trip to Fond du Lac in an automobile bus and did not return to Appleton until 3 o'clock this morning.

Dame's next game will be with Two Rivers here next Thursday evening. It will be "Booster night" for the local quint and efforts will be made to bring out an immense crowd. It is probable that Knapp, one of the brightest spots in the Milwaukee Bright Spots team, will be used in the center position in that game.

OLD TIME ATHLETES

Lawrence Coach of Nineties Says Old Timer Was as Good as Modern Athlete

Athletes of two decades ago, when many Appleton men, now in business or professional life, were playing football and baseball, were defended by Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, director of physical education at Princeton university, in an article in a recent issue of the Daily Princetonian.

Dr. Raycroft was one of the first baseball coaches at Lawrence college, serving here in the early nineties. Many old time football players will remember him.

Asked to compare the present day athletes with the men of another generation, Dr. Raycroft said:

"I do not think that in any sport, such as football, the average man of the present needs or possesses any greater intellect than the players of twenty years ago. I played football myself thirty years ago and coached for several years after my undergraduate days were over, and I can assure you that I pondered as long and as diligently over plays as any captain or coach of the team in 1921. The athlete then had just as quick wits as any man today." However, Dr. Raycroft declares emphatically that many more young men in the twentieth century engage actively in sports than was the case in other years. Hence, he believes that the modern boy is stronger and healthier.

Saudy Booked To Meet Hill On Wrestling Mat Next Wednesday Night

Smiling Swede Thinks He Can Put End to Local Man's March Toward Fame — Wrestles Here Jan. 4.

Credit Alex Sandy with a lot of grit. Alex is the big smiling Swede who hopped into the ring just before the recent wrestling match between George Hill and Elmer Sanders with the announcement that he would challenge the winner of the bout. He stuck to his promise and no sooner had Hill secured the decision than Sandy was right there with his challenge.

But his def wasn't accepted at once. Promoter Elmer Johnston of the Midwest Athletic club wanted to know something about Sandy's record and so put off his decision until he had a chance to do a little investigating. It wasn't long before he found that Sandy is an up and coming wrestler.

Sanders, who lost to Hill, is remaining in Appleton to see the bout. He thinks a lot of Sandy and figures that the big fellow, who weighs about 215 pounds, will make Hill handle for a victory. Sanders has a mighty fine opinion of Hill but thinks Sandy is in his class.

and is a regular fellow, they think he is the coming world's champion and the whole state of Minnesota is proud of him. Johnston also learned that Sandy held Sanders to a draw in a two hour match a few weeks ago and had defeated several high class artists. His only recent defeat was at the hands of John Freberg who won one fall just a few minutes before the expiration of the two hour limit.

With all that information at hand Johnston booked Sandy to meet Hill here next Wednesday night, Jan. 4. That is the only date the army could be secured in January and Johnston hurried the match so that the fans would have at least one opportunity of seeing Hill in action, before February.

EDISON MAY MAKE GOLD FROM LEAD

Washington—Thomas A. Edison confidently expects the transmutation of lead into gold.
 For centuries this has been the quest of man.
 In the early seventies, however, Sir William Crookes brought forward certain evidence tending to show that all matter has a common basis, and he proposed a name, "prothyl," for this substance. The idea did not gain great headway, however, until the discovery of radio-activity, which threw an entirely new light upon the constitution of matter.
 Until then it had been supposed that the "elements" were simple and indivisible; that the atom was the smallest particle of matter in the universe, and that these atoms represented the "building stones of the Cosmos."
 ATOM CAN BE DIVIDED
 Studies in radio activity proved that the atom itself is capable of being split up into still smaller particles. Known as "electrons," but these electrons are not composed of matter at all, but electricity! Hence arose the modern "electrical theory of matter." This theory says that all matter is ultimately electrical in basis; that the atom is exceedingly complex in nature, and is built up somewhat like our solar system, with a central nucleus in the middle (like our sun) and a number of particles revolving about it, as our planets revolve round the sun.
 The distances between them would be as great proportionally as the distances between the various planets and the sun, in our solar system! The central nucleus, on the modern theory of matter, consists in a negative charge of electricity, while the particles revolving round it are charges of positive electricity. These differ in number, and the various "elements" are merely qualities of the atom, due to the differences between the number of the positive charges with in the atom itself.

ELEMENTS CAN CHANGE

If you were to re
your home regare

YOU would put in all the very latest improvements. You would install modern conveniences which you know would render your home serviceable. You would make the appearance of your home attractive to the eye—both inside and out,—people would point to where you live and say, “this is a wonderful home.”
